CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

AEROPLANE SEARCH FOR ASSAILANT.

POLICE SERGEANT'S SMART WORK.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

James Murray (23), Summerhill parade, Dublin, was charged with wounding, with intent to cause serious bodily harm, and with assaulting Bridget Dowling, Cheeverstown, on April 7.

Mr. P. Lynch, K.C., and Mr. McGivern (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted, and the prisoner was not professionally represented.

Miss Bridget Dowling stated that the accused man came into her shop at Cheeverstown on April 7, between 2.30 and 3.30 in the afternoon, and bought cigarettes. She was living alone in the shop. The prisoner returned to the shop in about half an hour. He asked for a pennyworth of sweets. She was suspicious of him and kept her eye on him. He took a stone out of his pocket and struck her on the front of the head at least three blows. She threw up her hands and asked: "Are you going to murder me? What is it you want? Is it money?" He said: "Yes, but not coppers." She gave him the till. Both of them heard the noise of an approaching lorry, and he told her that if she went to the door he would shoot her. He took money from the till (£3 or £4) and put it in his pocket.

Several witnesses were examined with a view to the identification of the prisoner as having been in the vicinity of Miss Dowling's house on April 7.

SEEN IN FIELD.

Sergeant English, Clondalkin, stated that when the matter was reported to him at 3.30 in the afternoon he went to Baldonnel and got the use of an aeroplane, with a view to capturing the person who attacked Miss Dowling. After flying for half an hour he saw a man in the corner of a field, and the aeroplane landed as quickly as possible. Witness pursued the man, but he escaped. He arrested the prisoner on April 11, and when charged with the offence he said, "I was not there at all." Miss Dowling identified the prisoner at a parade and said: "You are a nice man to try and murder an old woman in that way."

Dr. Andrew Ryan, Clondalkin, described the injuries to Miss Dowling.

The case for the State closed, and the prisoner did not offer any evidence, but handed in a statement, in which he said that his wife and child were without food for three days, and that as he was passing Miss Dowling's shop he was tempted. He was sorry for having assaulted Miss Dowling. He only took £1 7s. from the till. He had been three months in jail and asked his lordship to deal leniently with him.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty on all counts, and, sentencing the prisoner to three years' penal servitude, Mr. Justice Hanna said that highway robbery should be put down.

Mr. Justice Hanna highly commended Sergeant English for his work in connection with the case.

The Court adjourned until this morning.

The Parish Church of Tempo, Diocese of Clogher, which has been undergoing extensive renovation, was recently re-opened for Divine Service. The Bishop of Clogher preached at the opening Service.

LIVERPOOL—Better Winnipeg market caused forward deliveries of wheat here to improve moderately at the outset, but prices afterwards receded owing to rains in Australia until a moderate depreciation from previous night had been registered. TONE AND COMMENT

DUBLIN IDLE.

GUINNESS EASIER.

Business on Dublin Stock market fell away yesterday to small dimensions. There was little or nothing wrong with the tone of the market, but lack of public interest at the moment has an adverse effect on quotations. Free State Funds were steady, and Land Bonds rose to 108½. The War Loan was easier.

Corporation Stocks were passed over and Banks were unchanged.

Great Southern Ord. rose 1½ to 13½, but the Guaranteed lost ¾ at 42. Great Northern Guaranteed was 10s. lower.

Guinness units lost sixpence and the Pref. ¼. Dublin Distillers "A" was three half-pence lower, and Distillers (Scotch) lost 1s. B. and I. Pref. was unchanged, Alliance Gas was 1s. 3d. lower. Switzer Ord. rose three-pence and Chocolate Debs. 2s. 6d. Parkes Debs. and Ranks (Ireland) Pref. were both threepence easier. Ranks (Ireland) Ord. repeated 14s. 3d.

The three or four cross-Channel Industrials which came to business were ninepence to a few half-pence lower.

LONDON QUIET.

BRITISH FUNDS WEAKEN.

Decidedly quieter conditions marked the London Stock Markets yesterday, and, in sympathy with the falling-off in interest, markets generally disclosed an easier trend, though for the most part the margins were of modest dimensions. Even British Funds, which recently have attracted a good investment demand, relapsed into a state of inanition, and prices consequently finished on a rather lower plane. The "Home" Industrials also were subdued and somewhat easier inclined, but the trans-Atlantics kept firm. Among Mines Kaffirs made a dull start, but developed a rather firmer tendency in the later dealings. Oils attracted a moderate volume of support, Burmahs being especially favoured, and closing strong at a considerably improved level.

As indicated above, there was a marked falling-off in the investment demand apparent recently for Gilt-edged descriptions, and prices were mostly fractionally lower on the day. Consols 4 p.c. dropped ¼ to 112⅜, while Funding Loan at 113⅜ and Victory Bonds at 111⅜ x.r. were also each ¼ down. The Conversion issues also disclosed an easier trend, but India Stocks stiffened fractionally, with others not materially altered. There was not a great deal passing among Foreign Government Stocks, and apart from a few fractional recessions quotations were well maintained. German Bonds were dullish, the 7 p.c. and the Potash Sevens each losing ½, while Brazilians also slipped back the turn.

A modest inquiry was evident for British Rails, but this had little influence on quotations, which were mostly unchanged from Monday's levels. Southern Pref.-Ord., however, lost ¼ to 76½, but the Def.-Ord. at 24⅛ were the fraction better. Following the recent set-back in Argentine Rails, a few buyers appeared, and a modest recovery was shown. Grand Trunk 4 p.c. Perp. Debs. gained a point to 103¾ x.d., but San Paulo Ord. slipped back a point to 79.

In the Industrial market dull features were provided by Radiation, Marks and Spencer, Dunlops, Paton and Baldwins and Scribbans, the last-named weakening rather sharply on continued selling. Brick Shares failed to hold the whole of the previous day's advance, and Motors and Aviation issues were easier inclined. Rubber Shares moved narrowly and in irregular fashion, but Tea descriptions were quietly steady.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

BRITISH OXYGEN FIRM.

Quiet conditions prevailed in most sections of the Industrial Market yesterday, and, with few fresh buyers about, values generally lost ground.

Even the recent favourites failed to attract much attention, though here and there a little support was in evidence at times.

A renewed demand was reported from the North for British Oxygen, which finished a firm market.

After displaying a firm front for the greater part of the session, the trans-Atlantic counters reacted in the late dealings.

Cables and Wireless stocks remained an uncertain market, the Preference and "A" Ordinary being fractionally lower on balance at 67 and 15, respectively.

With only a few exceptions, price changes in the Motor and Aviation group were against holders, business being on only a moderate scale. Austins fell ⅜ to 5⅜, Rolls Royce lost ⅜ at 5⅜, and Standards further declined 9d. to 63s. 9d.

An irregular tendency continued to characterise Iron, Coal, and Steel descriptions. Among the firm spots may be mentioned Wm. Cory, which rose 1s. to 75s. 6d., Harland and Wolff First Prefs., which advanced 9d. to 4s. 6d., and Swan Hunter, which improved 6d. to 15s. 6d.

Although moderate support was again noticeable in places, Brewery shares reflected the quiet conditions prevailing in other sections. Charringtons further improved to 58s. 9d On the other hand, Bass and Watney Deferred came on offer. In the Alcohol section, Distillers were subject to scattered selling from the North, and eventually closed 1s. down on the day.

The Tobacco leaders made a mixed showing. Carreras "A" rallied to 7⅞, and Gallahers to 3½, but "Imps" were on offer around 124s., and United South Ordinary at 4⅞.

Little attention was given to textile descriptions. Bradford Dyers, Calico Printers, and J. and P. Coats were marked down further a few pence, and Bleachers were dull following the full report.

Rayon issues showed a somewhat irregular tendency, though business was small. The British Celanese issues hardened, but both American and Canadian Celanese reacted. Courtaulds were quietly maintained.

Business was small and of a selective nature in the Miscellaneous group, the general tendency being irregular. Among the leading counters, Dunlops and Chemicals finished a few pence easier, and United Molasses reacted slightly. In the Building group a little profit-taking lowered Eastwoods. Among Cement issues, British Portland were a good market at 69s. 6d., but Eastwood Cement and Oxford and Shipton finished lower British Oxygen were in renewed demand, strengthening to 68s. 7½d.

OIL SHARES FIRM.

Although the value of business in Oil shares yesterday still left much to be desired, there was certainly more interest in the leading issues, and the tendency of the market, as a whole, was firm.

Advices received overnight from New York cannot be said to have had much influence, price movements in American Oil stocks on Monday having been of a slight and irregular character.

As regards Continental business, Paris was certainly not a seller, while small buying orders trickled through from Amsterdam for Royal Dutch. The Eagle issues, however, received no attention from Continental operators. A steady investment demand existed for Burmahs, to which the price responded readily, and Royal Dutch closed materially higher.

RUBBER SHARES QUIET.

Idle conditions continued in the Rubber Share Market; yet, despite the absence of interest and the lack of any lead from the commodity market, no decided retrograde movement was apparent; indeed, on balance, price changes favoured holders. F.M.S. Planters were a firmer market, closing 10½d. better at 31s. 10½d., while United Sua Betong gained 4½d. to 55s. 4½d., with Tandjong and Telogoredjo each 3d. harder. Malacca, however, went back to 30s. 9d., a loss of 9d., while Anglo-Dutch lost 3d. to 24s. 9d., with Rubber Trust 2½d. down at 32s. 6d. There was not a great deal going on in the commodity market. Spot and June rallied to 6⅞d., after 6½d. per pound, while October to December was quoted 6⅛d. to 6⅜d. and 6⅛d. per pound, with January to March at 6⅛d. to 6⅜d. and 6⅛d. per pound.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY.

Place Names : Father of a Fellow : The Whipsnade Lions.
Anglers at Blackrock : Irish Horses.

A Fellow's Father.

I was interested to hear that the Rev John A. Walton, M.A., the newly-elected President of the Methodist Church in Ireland, is the father of Mr. E. T. S. Walton, Sc.D., F., T.C.D., who was elected to Fellowship in Experimental Science at Trinity College this year. It will be recalled that the new Fellow came into public prominence as the collaborator, with Lord Rutherford and Dr. Cockburn, in the famous experiment of "splitting the atom" at the Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge. The other Fellow elected this year—Mr. William Bedell Stanford, F., T.C.D.—is also a "son of the Manse," being the only son of the Rev. Bedell Stanford, M.A., formerly Rector of Dundrum, Co. Tipperary.

Place Names.

Some weeks ago the B.B.C. historian of the Elizabethan period troubled my ear with "Youghil" as the name of Sir Walter Raleigh's (pronounced, I find, "Rawly" by the cultured) town. I was excusably critical at the time, but have been much humbled to find it an accepted pronunciation on the spot "among the illiterate"! But it is a queer name anyhow, and reminds one of the classic explanation offered by a native of Skibbereen as to why such a name should exist: "Sure," said he, "it's to distinguish it from other places of the same name!" In these bi-lingual days of ours, when "Dunlaoghaire" is pronounced (as Mark Twain might have told us) "Baile Atha Cliath," and every street is renamed with the apparent object of concealing its identity, one begins to take a natural interest in the rules of the game.

Sandymount.

Sandymount, for instance, where I am staying (writes a friend), appears on the railway station name board as Dumac Traga, which the dictionary tells me means "The Sand Hill of the Beach." Mount Mellick, on the other hand—which my childhood's fancy pictured as an Alp in central Ireland—revealed itself to me recently as a veritable depression in a depression where the Barrow comes from—or near it; and its name (vide P. W. Joyce's "Irish Names of Places") means the Mount, or Bog, of the Mellick, or Marshes (I take no responsibility for case endings). "Why, of course," said my motoring companion, "Sligo folk always call the bogs "mountches." And some Lurgan friends chipped in with anecdotes of a wild housemaid who came "from the Mountches of Lough Neagh."

And Sandymount? When one comes to think of it, where, in any language, is a sand hill called "mountain?" Even if it were, where in all that coast is the sand dune that might stand parent to such a mountainy name?—unless, indeed, it be the lob-worm casts on the strand! But "The Sandy Bog"—surely, if there be aptness in language, it is this! Will the learned ones help us? What, for instance, was the place called when King John encamped at Ringsend? And, while they are at it, is the name known of the Danish Montcalm who defended the heights of Dollymount on the other side of the harbour against the Alpine chasseurs of Brian Boru?

Irish Horses.

Irish-breds are finding purchasers these days. Mr. Basil Briscoe, the trainer of Golden Miller—the Hon. Dorothy Paget's champion—has been to Ireland recently. He purchased Lucky Land, a two-year-old bay gelding by Ellangowan, from Sans Guerre. Lucky Land is a winner who got a verdict at the Curragh May meeting for Mr. Michael Collins. Mr. Briscoe's other purchase is Bud Fisher, aptly named; for he is a brown gelding by Lightning Artist, out of Vogue. Bud Fisher ran third at Leopardstown recently in the name and colours of Senator Parkinson. Gurteen has also been sold to a South African customer, and will leave the Curragh to-day for Southampton, en route for Cape Town. Gurteen has been an inmate of the Maddenstown stables. He was the property of Mr. E. J. Phelan, and is a bay colt (three years) by Soldennis, out of Pentstemon. He has won twice this season—on one occasion at Baldoyle, and his other victory was at Ballinrobe.

The Whipsnade Lions.

During a visit to the open-air "Zoo" at Whipsnade some time ago (writes a correspondent) I saw the lions' dell in which the recent fatality occurred. It is a large hollow, partly natural and partly artificial, situated on the slopes of the high plateau on which the "Zoo" has been formed, and surrounded by a high spiked railing. From various accounts I had looked forward to seeing the king of beasts stalking around majestically in his native environment, but no such vision met my eyes. Three gaunt, scraggy miserable-looking lions lay stretched out, apparently asleep, on an out-cropping of chalk. I was told that they remained in that position most of the day, and, even when food was brought to them, they showed no enthusiasm, but dragged themselves listlessly in the direction of the meal. These lions had been purchased from a travelling menagerie. In another extensive enclosure two black bears remained with their noses constantly pressed against the railings, as if they were still in a cage, and on the look-out for tit-bits from visitors. These circumstances led me to doubt whether wild animals, which have been confined in narrow precincts all their lives, really appreciate an extension of freedom. The principal attractions of Whipsnade are the birds, deer, camels and wild cattle; but, so far as lions and tigers are concerned, the specimens on view are much inferior to those in the Dublin collection.

Blackrock Anglers.

With the advent of the high tides and the warm weather a small, but very zealous, band of fishermen will start their nocturnal operations. Walk along the sea wall from Merrion to Blackrock Baths any fine night when the tide is almost in or full, and you will find at least two or three anglers trying their luck. They will keep their lonely vigils until three or four in the morning, and often, indeed, they have little to show for their trouble, save an insignificant dab or two. Still, there is always the chance of something really good. Big bass are lured in by the fat feeding, and last year I came upon one of the brethren in a state of great excitement. Most of his line had been carried away by a very large fish, and he was bending on a new cast and hook with increased optimism. Though they may catch little, there must be something very alluring in this all-night fishing. The weather is very often warm and clear; the moon shines softly on the water, and it is deliciously fresh and peaceful. A pipe tastes sweet at such an hour, and a "swig" from a good bottle of stout or a "pint of plain" in a big jug makes as good a paradise as the Hedonistic old Persian ever imagined.

QUIDNUNC.

INSPIRATION OF ACHILL.

A BELGIAN ARTIST'S VISION OF IRELAND.

BY STEPHEN GWYNN.

NO two regions in Europe can be more unlike each other than Western Ireland and Belgium; and since Mademoiselle Howet is evidently attracted by strangeness, it was natural that coming to Ireland she should make for the very limits of the land, where nature is at its fiercest and sternest. "The Poisoned Glen," a wild ravine between Errigal and Glen Veagh, may have caught her by its name; at all events, she shows in her collection of pictures, now on view at the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, two large studies of it, one of which is rendered more impressive by a more than usually fantastic patterning of clouds. But most of her work, and the best of it, owes its inspiration to Achill. Inspiration is the proper word; Achill mountains and cliffy shores, Achill's little houses, donkeys and turf-stacks have suggested these decorative designs. She paints them as one who sees something new and wholly unfamiliar; she renders not the exact image, but the phantasm it has suggested to her mind. Paul Henry, painting the same scenes, using the same material, gives us something that is never photographic, always simplified by skilful selection, till emphasis falls on the broad essential lines, and the result is a picture which shows to everyone familiar with the West a beauty that he has always seen, and yet now sees in it only with the quintessence of his normal vision.

DECORATIVE.

Mademoiselle Howet does not seek to paint what the ordinary man sees; at least, as the ordinary man sees it. Now and again, for instance, in one low-toned study of Dooagh she catches the homely character of three or four whitewashed houses, with geese in front, in a way that is delightful and hardly even extravagant: or when she paints what she calls "The Silver Bucket," a mountain lake ringed in with steep sides, with the reflections from them shimmering over it. No one can mistake what is represented, and hardly anyone can fail to perceive the mood in which she has observed that shut-in stillness. But as to most of them, we should all rise up and declare that we had never seen such skies, and that a turf-stack to her looks quite other than it does to us. That does not prevent one from seeing that her vision, say of the Minan Cliffs, is not only admirably decorative, but is the more interesting just because it is not our vision. For that matter, when we look at her "Street in Dublin," we may be inclined to wish that Earlsfort terrace, with University College at the end of it, really did look like that to us, or could look like that. She had endowed it with curves, which if they were there would be charming.

A STORMY BEAUTY.

Her studies of the island people at Achill have force and solidity; they are seen with what looks to us others like Victorian, but that is now the approved way to see people and faces. They are less individual, less unlike other people's work than are Mademoiselle Howet's landscapes. It is worth noting that in a study of her own country, the Ardennes, which also appears in the collection, there is the same disposition to see the world through dark glasses. All her pictures have a stir of movement in them; but the beauty which she attains is a stormy beauty, the vision of a blackavised world. Even the Achill donkeys turn the colour of a turf-stack, and the turf-stacks go black as turf, ideally speaking, ought to be, but very seldom is.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

"IRELAND'S PAST."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Having read with appreciation your article in Tuesday's issue of the Irish Times may I quote a well-known saying that "Irish history is for Englishmen to remember, but for Irishmen to forget"? Also, may I question the statement that: "we cannot picture the life of a Munster clan in the twelfth century, or a town within the Pale during the seventeenth century"; whereas "the English can visualise any particular period of their past with fair accuracy"?

Such pictures cannot be made accurately by the people of any nation without some literary aptitude and considerable patience, because they are of the nature of patchwork rather than of embroidery. If English people do visualise their eleventh century past more accurately than we do, it is, possibly, due to the fact that their splendid mediæval churches, ornate with carvings, monuments and stained glass—all of which picture and preserve the dress and occupations of their various periods—have not been destroyed, nor defaced as completely as were any such that we possessed in Ireland. They remain, tangible and available (at very least weekly, if not daily), for measuring points and comparison.

It is well that the written Irish materials for the reconstruction of pictures of Irish mediæval life become each year more abundant and available. But it is probable that even the pen of a Curtis, or a Green, cannot make the annals of a mere guildsman, craftsman, pilot, tradesman, tanner or weaver as exciting as the annals of a battle, a hero, or a martyr for Irish people. Yet, already, there awakes the desire to visualise things and conditions rather than passions and individuals.

As to the town life in the Pale during the seventeenth century, it is very far from obscure. But its records need not be sought in Irish sources. Both Cromwellian and Stuart colonists were fairly good correspondents.—Yours, etc.,

L. M. McCRAITH.

WATER ECONOMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In domestic houses saving in use of water is difficult to secure—at any rate, in full. To be completely effective it would require that every member of the household must practise a constant personal discipline, which, in turn, means bearing constantly in mind the water scarcity. I have discovered a simple, automatic and completely effective method of saving, so far as it goes. Nearly all cisterns allow a very generous margin in the quantity of water for each flush. In each cistern I have placed two pint glass bottles filled with water for steadiness, and in positions where they do not interfere with the ball cock or other mechanism. The result is two pints of water saved on each flush—with no trouble to the user and no risk to health or sanitation.—Yours, etc.,

'HOUSEHOLDER."

SHAMEFUL ACTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—It has been brought to my notice that the water in a drinking trough for animals at Smithfield was fouled by someone throwing bad fish into it yesterday, thus making it unfit for animals to drink, when it is urgently needed in the present hot weather. This is a shameful action on the part of some person, either through thoughtlessness or with deliberate intent to foul the water, and is a disgrace to any city.

It is the duty of everyone who sees a trough either dirty or dry to report it immediately to this Society or to the Chief Engineer, Engineer's Department, Dublin Corporation, who act promptly in matters of this kind, and cleaned and filled the Smithfield trough without delay yesterday.

May I remind shopkeepers that it would be a great act of kindness if they would put a bowl of clean water daily at their doors for the dogs that cannot reach up to the horses' trough for a drink?—Yours, etc.,

AN OLD DUBLIN CHARITY.

THE ROOMKEEPERS' SOCIETY.

AIDING THE POOREST OF THE POOR.

REFERENCES to the exorbitant rents charged for rooms in the slum areas and to the Dublin housing problem were made at the 144th annual meeting of the Sick and Indigent Roomkeepers' Society, which was held at Palace street, Dublin, yesterday, the Lord Mayor of Dublin presiding.

The report stated that during the year the expenditure in relief of deserving cases amounted to £3,155 19s. 5d.; the number of families assisted was 4,871, consisting of 20,735 persons. Compared with 1932, these figures showed an increase of £307 in the amount distributed and of 244 in the families assisted. The subscriptions showed a decrease of £221.

Moving the adoption of the report, the Chairman said that the Society had done splendid service during the year. Within the past week, while he was absent, a deputation, comprising about 200 people, without warning or notice of any kind, had called to the Mansion House. His house steward assured them that he was out, but some of them were inclined to think that he was avoiding them. He would like it to be made clear that he was only too happy to see these people. Most of the members of the deputation had pink papers in their hands. Those pink papers were summonses after notices to quit had been served on tenants of rooms, and apparently there was a large number of evictions threatened in the York street area.

Exorbitant Rents.

When, the Lord Mayor continued, he looked up the lists dealing with the housing in that area, he found that most exorbitant rents were being charged for single rooms. There had been brought to his notice cases where people were being asked to pay 10s., 12s. and 15s. a week for one room. He knew of a case where a man with a family of five, who was receiving £1 a week under the Unemployment Assistance Act, had to pay 12s. a week in rent.

"The time has come," said the Lord Mayor, "when we should draw the attention of the authorities to these matters; the time has come when there should be an inquiry into the question of exorbitant rents." He thought that it was up to them to see that there would be no evictions from these areas, especially where the rents were such that any reasonable person considered them exorbitant.

He knew, he added, that £3 and £4 a week had been drawn from some of these houses, and every decent man and woman must enter protests and stop the practice. There were a large number of decent landlords owning such houses, but there were a few black sheep as well.

Concluding, the Lord Mayor suggested that the deputation which had waited on him should wait on him again. He would be happy to see them at any time. The matter was giving some worry to him and to public representatives generally.

Mrs. Maud Walsh, T.C., said that the Society came in where State aid failed. She thought that the time had come when they must abolish the workhouses. There was an urgent need for the building by the State of thousands of single-roomed and two-roomed houses to be allocated to the poor people free of rent. It was an obligation on the State to help all helpless citizens who had been rendered destitute through no fault of their own, and it was just as great an obligation to provide these people with houses.

Cause of Slums.

Mrs. M. Kettle, T.C., supporting, said that the slums were a cancer at the heart of their graceful city, and everyone knew of the Corporation's efforts to eradicate them. Their Lord Mayor and Deputy T. Kelly especially had been doing, and were doing, great work in this connection. The slums were the result of this country's political and economic history, and it would take years before they could be abolished.

The report was adopted.

Sir Joseph Glynn proposed that the Society deserved recognition and increased patronage. Dublin citizens, he said, should make a special effort on behalf of the roomkeepers.

Mr. P. S. Doyle, T.D., chairman of the Dublin Board of Assistance, seconding, said that there were in Dublin thirty or forty charitable organisations.

The Roomkeepers' Society was one of the oldest, and, as chairman of the Board of Assistance, he appreciated the efficient and courteous co-operation of the Society's officials with the relieving officers. Referring to the means test under the Unemployment Assistance Act, he said that assistance from charitable organisations was often taken into consideration in the administration of the Act.

Mr. Costello, T.C., supporting the resolution, said that the Dublin Corporation was going as fast as it could to provide houses for the poor. They were being kept back owing to the lack of finance. An idea of the magnitude of their efforts could be obtained from the fact that at the end of the present year £1,500,000 would have to be borrowed for present housing schemes. In five or ten years the Corporation expected to have the slums completely abolished.

The resolution was passed unanimously.

Messrs. Craig, Gardner and Co. were elected auditors for the coming year.

On the motion of the Rev. Canon E. J. Young, B.D., seconded by Mr. McClintock Dix, solicitor, a vote of thanks for presiding was passed to the Lord Mayor.

THE MENACE OF TUBERCULOSIS.

DANGER OF INFECTION.

PROBLEM OF ADVANCED CASES.

AT the meeting of the County Dublin Board of Health, which was held yesterday in the County Council Offices, Parnell square, Dublin,

Dr. Harbison, County Medical Officer of Health, submitted his annual report for the year 1933 on the public health of the county. He said that the death rate had been reduced from 14.5 to 13.7, which meant a reduction of 72 deaths in 1933 as compared with 1932. The only unsatisfactory item in the report was the increase in the number of deaths from tuberculosis, which was, no doubt, due to the insufficiency of the facilities for the treatment of advanced cases of tuberculosis in County Dublin. They wanted, he said, means to educate the people as to the prevention of infection from others living in their homes. There ought to be adequate accommodation for advanced cases provided in the sanatorias. At present they only wanted to take in the early cases.

Mr. Rollins—And the advanced cases are sent back to contaminate others.

Dr. Harbison—That is what explains the slight increase in the number of cases reported.

Mr. J. J. Shiel said that the Hospitals' Commission should be called upon not to hold up the money allocated out of the sweeps for the treatment of tuberculosis and the provision of proper institutions.

Dr. Harbison remarked that half the cases of tuberculosis were already advanced before they got to the doctors.

The report was adopted.

DUAL PURPOSE GRATE.

It was reported that a grate had been invented which would burn both turf and coal, but that to put it in the Board's cottages would involve an extra expenditure of 9s. 6d. per grate.

Mr. Dardis (chairman) said that there was no hope of people burning turf in Balbriggan.

Mr. P. Belton, T.D., wanted to know what sort of "mongrel" would suit both turf and coal. He believed that the patriots in North Dublin could be provided with a hearthstone, which was the only thing to burn turf on, and when they got tired of it they could give them grates.

Mr. Russell, Surveyor, said that the objection to a grate was that the draught would burn away the turf too quickly.

The Chairman said that there was virtually no turf burnt in County Dublin.

The Surveyor was directed to submit a report in the matter.

CO. ANTRIM WEDDING.

THE REV. W. J. PARR, M.A., AND MRS. E. CORKERY.

In Lambeg (Co. Antrim) Parish Church yesterday the Rector of Lambeg, the Rev. W. J. Parr, M.A., son of the late Mr. W. J. Parr, formerly Registrar and Bursar of Stranmillis Training College, and of Mrs. Parr, was married to Mrs. Ethel Corkey, only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ewart, Derryvolgie, Lisburn.

The officiating clergy were the Bishop of Cashel, the Right Rev. J. F. MacNeice, D.D., who was rector at St. Nicholas, Carrickfergus, when Mr. Parr first came North from Dublin as curate for St. Nicholas's Parish; the Rev. Canon W. H. Bradley, M.A., Rector of Bangor, and the Rev. W. R. S. Clarendon, B.A. Miss L. Henderson presided at the organ.

Owing to the comparatively recent death of the bride's father, guests were invited only to the church, and the rector and his wife drove straight to Belfast immediately after the ceremony, en route for Brittany.

The bride, who was given away by Major G. V. Ewart, was accompanied by Mrs. Willie Ewart. Mr. Eric Scales was best man.

D'OYLY CARTE OPERA COMPANY.

"IOLANTHE."

The wonderful appeal of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas is demonstrated by the fact that though the season of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company is now in its third week there is no waning of interest. The Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, was crowded almost to capacity last night when the company gave a repeat performance of "Iolanthe." This extravaganza of "The Peer and the Peri," in which Gilbert has so delightfully burlesqued the English House of Lords, is in some respects the best loved of the operas, notwithstanding that there are so many of its features rather hoary and out of date. However, the whole play is so truly Gilbertian that it can never die, and so one found the audience last night enjoying the humour and comedy as if everything were new to them. They enjoyed hugely Sir Henry Lytton's characterisation of the susceptible Lord Chancellor and the sly digs to the legal profession in his song, "Said I to myself said I." Darrell Fancourt and John Dean were commanding as the Earls of Mountararat and Tolloller, and Richard Watson sang with splendid voice and humour the Sentry Song. Marjorie Eyre played the part of Iolanthe with rare appeal. She is a close student of Gilbert and Sullivan, and always creates just the right atmosphere to her character studies. Dorothy Gill was again a regal figure as the Queen of the Fairies—just dominating things while on the stage. Dores Denny, Maisie Baxter, and Margaret O'Brien were happy in their parts as fairies—very promising material here.

Two changes were made from the first performance: Muriel Dickson came on as Phyllis, the Arcadian Shepherdess and Ward in Chancery, and a more delightful impersonation of the character one could not conceive, but then one expects that standard now from this clever artiste. More interest was aroused by the appearance of John Fraser as Strephon. A newcomer, this young man at once won the audience. He has youth on his side, and a grace and charm of manner that suited the part of the youthful Arcadian Shepherd. His lines were delivered in a pleasant tone, beautifully clear, and his acting was easy and natural—a suggestion of being new to the part rather lent charm than otherwise. To complete the attraction, he has a light baritone voice of very pleasant quality, and sang all his music with splendid understanding and ease. He was a distinct success, and one looks forward to seeing him in other parts.

LAND ALLOTMENTS.

By an Order of the Minister for Local Government, laid on the table of the Dail yesterday, persons receiving home assistance or outdoor relief will be entitled to secure the allotments provided by the recent Acquisition of Land (Allotments) Act. Others who would also be qualified will include those employed on relief works, subject to the conditions that they have not reasonable prospects of continuous employment during the ensuing six months, and that the total period for which they were employed during the preceding twelve months did not exceed twenty-four hours per week, and that their means did not exceed £52 per year in county borough, or Dun Laoghaire, or £39 in the case of other areas.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATE.

A debate was held by the Law Students' Debating Society at the Kings' Inns, Dublin, on Monday, with Mr. W. J. Roche in the chair.

The case for hearing was Cooke v. the Midland Great Western Railway, 1909, A.C.P. 229.

Mr. D. B. W. Good opened for the appellants, and was followed by his junior, Mr. H. R. McWilliam.

The respondent's case was argued by Mr. N. K. McDonald, with whom was Mr. D. McCann as junior.

The Chairman summed up, and allowed the appeal with costs.

ON THE WIRELESS

Daily Programme Review.

DUBLIN: Artane Band, 7.30.

BELFAST: Orchestral Concert. An Irish Programme, 20.00.

B.B.C. NATIONAL: "The Calendar" (Edgar Wallace), 21.35 (9.35).

ALL REGIONALS: Old Music Halls—The Holborn, 20.00 (8.0).

BRUSSELS No. 1: Dramatic Cantata, "Francesca da Rimini" (Gilson.), 20.30 (8.30).

BRESLAU: Choral Concert, 23.15 (11.15).

THE Artane Band will broadcast an hour of music to-night in the Dublin programme, and this will be the only band performance during the evening. The soloists are more varied than usual, there being only two vocal items, while Eileen Woods and Posy Shreider will give a short violin and viola recital, 9.30, and Mary Braid will play light piano solos at 9.50. The play to be presented by the Ulidia Players is entitled "Between two Stools," by J. H. McIlween, and will be heard at 8.45.

An Edgar Wallace play figures in the Daventry programme, where "The Calendar" will come on at 9.35. It is a racing story with a good plot, and therefore should broadcast well. The adaptation is by Barbara Burnham, and the production by Howard Rose.

Numbers of listeners will be glad to see that the series "Old Music Halls" is still continuing, and that Wilson Disher, who has written and arranged the programmes throughout the series, has now got to the Holborn. Listeners who are not familiar with the actual theatres represented in this series know and enjoy the songs by the capable cast representing the singers who made them popular.

The Kutcher String Quartet will give a concert of Chamber Music at 9, which may be heard on all the Regional wave-lengths except West. In the programme are Haydn's Quartet in D minor, Op. 76, and Beethoven's Quartet in F, Op. 18. Walter Lear will play the bas clarinet in York Bowen's Fantasy Quintet, written in one movement, and some saxaphone solos.

Belfast's programme includes an organ recital by Albert Taylor, to be relayed from the Presbyterian Church, Rosemary street, at 12 noon, and two orchestral concerts. The first is the weekly one from the Museum, conducted by Godfrey Brown, with Albert V. Froggart (baritone) as soloist. Starting the concert with Beethoven's Symphony No. 8, in F, Op. 93, the orchestra closes it with selections of Sullivan's music.

The concert at night comprises an Irish programme, in which the Dublin violinist, Nancie Lord, will take part. She is playing the first movement of Sir Hamilton Harty's Concerto in D minor, supported by the Belfast Wireless Orchestra, under the direction of Peter Montgomery, which later will play Hardebeck's "The lark in the clear air" and Fritz Brasé's Rhapsody No. 4, "Erin for Ever."

A COINCIDENCE.

When earl meets earl then begins a golfing tussle. Two Earls of Carrick met, by a strange coincidence, in the fifth round of the Parliamentary Golf Handicap at Sunningdale. One of them was the Prince of Wales, and he was conceding three strokes to his Irish namesake, the 8th Earl of Carrick, who sits in the House of Lords as Baron Butler. One of the Prince's Scottish titles is Earl of Carrick.

The Prince lost at the 19th hole.

FREE STATE ARMY HORSEMEN.

LEAVE TO COMPETE AT OLYMPIA.

Colonel Hogan with six officers from the Army horse jumping team which will represent the Free State at the International Horse Show, Olympia, London, left Dun Laoghaire yesterday morning by the Holyhead mail boat, en route for London. The horses and their grooms had preceded them.

The officers and the horses allocated to each are:—

Commandant J. G. O'Dwyer (three horses)—Limerick Lace, Blarney Castle and Shannon Power.

Captain F. P. Finlay (one horse)—Cuchulainn.

Captain D. J. Corry (one horse)—Slievenamon.

Captain C. B. Harty (two horses)—Miss Ireland and Kilmallock.

Captain S. A. Aherne (three horses)—Gallowglass, Ireland's Own and Ben Eadair.

Lieutenant J. J. Lewis (two horses)—Tramore Boy and Rosnaree.

The Horse Show opens to-morrow.

SERVICE OF INTERCESSION.

The Board of Missions for the United Diocese of Dublin, Glendalough and Kildare met on Thursday, the Archbishop of Dublin presiding. The other members present were: The Rev. Chancellor Scott, Canon Connell, the Rev. W. E. Vandeleur, Lieutenant-Colonel C. L. Graham, Mr. R. H. Giltrap, Miss E. M. C. Jellett, Miss K. H. Huggard, and the Rev. D. H. Gillman and Canon Goff (hon. secretaries). The secretary reported that the Rev. Prebendary Cash had promised to preach at the Service of Intercession on St. Andrew's Day in St

CONCESSION TO TEA DEALERS.

MINISTER'S AMENDMENT TO FINANCE BILL.

DUTIES ON SPIRITS AND BEER TO REMAIN.

AN amendment to the Finance Bill, introduced by the Minister for Finance in the Dail last night, will be welcomed by tea merchants.

It provides for a refund of twopence per lb. on every pound of tea after the first 500 lb. to merchants who, in July, 1934, had in their possession more than 1,000 lb. of tea on which duty was paid, and where no portion of the stock had been received after June 16, 1934, or received back after delivery on sale.

Efforts by the Opposition to bring down the rate of income tax to four shillings, and to reduce the duty on beer and spirits, failed.

INCOME TAX MOTION FAILS.

Mr. MULCAHY (U.I., North Dublin) (for Mr. McGilligan) moved an amendment to reduce income tax from 4s. 6d. in the £ to 4s. in the £. He said that the income tax had been substantially increased, and such an excessive burden had been placed on the income taxpayers and the commercial community that there had been a yield of £800,000 less in income tax.

The MINISTER said that he was not prepared to accept the amendment.

Mr. COSGRAVE said that last year there had been a surplus of £141,000, and this year a surplus of nearly one and a half millions. In two years nearly three and a half million pounds had been collected from the taxpayers, and had not been accounted for in any of the services. There was no need for the Minister to borrow money for the payment of bounties and subsidies, because these could be met out of revenue, but there was a case for reducing taxation.

On a division the amendment was rejected by 37 votes to 15.

LOWER PAID WORKERS.

Mr. MULCAHY (for Mr. McGilligan) moved an amendment the object of which was to relieve some of the lower paid workers from income tax at a time when everything that they bought was dearer owing to tariffs and other operations of the Ministerial policy. The amendment was to a new sub-section, and to repeal thereby other sections of the bill, to the effect:—"An individual who makes in the manner prescribed by the Income Tax Act a claim in that behalf, and makes a return in the prescribed form of his total income, shall be entitled to be charged at half the standard rate of tax on the first £225 of his taxable income."

Mr. McENTEE said that the speech of the deputy in support of the amendment was an example of mental senility that characterised the Opposition in these matters. They wanted to hark back to the halcyon days of 1931-32, under the pretence that the income tax then was not so high. At present the standard rate of income tax was 4s. 6d. in the £, the same as it was in Great Britain. In 1931-'32 the rate was 3s. 6d. in the Saorstat, but it should not be assumed that because the standard rate now in Great Britain and in the Saorstat was the same that the effective rate of taxation was the same in both countries. In the Saorstat a married man, with a family of three, earning £400 a year, paid no income tax at all, while under the Cosgrave administration in 1931-'32 he would have to pay £3 18s. 9d. income tax. On the whole, the tax was lighter in the Saorstat than in Great Britain.

THE TAXING MINISTER.

Mr. J. DILLON (U.I., Donegal) said he wondered if the Minister was still under the delusion that he had reduced income tax by £2,000,000 a year. He would like to see how the Minister had reduced taxation on the deserving class contemplated in the amendment.

Mr. MacENTEE—I confined myself entirely in my remarks to income tax.

Mr. DILLON—Yes, and by doing so you have not given the amendment any adequate consideration at all. If the Minister gets his thinking done for him he should satisfy himself that the thinking is properly done. The Minister has piled up a burden of taxation such as had never before been imposed. He was the greatest taxing Minister that the country had ever seen, and had put on £1,500,000 extra in taxation last year without knowing that he was doing it.

The amendment was rejected by 39 votes to 20.

REVOKED ALLOWANCES.

In connection with Section 2, which revokes allowances in respect of repairs,

Professor THRIFT (Independent, Dublin University) moved that a new rule be added to the rules, providing that if the owner of land or building showed that the annual value was greater than the rent, according to the average of the preceding five years, he shall be entitled, on making a claim for the purpose, to repayment of the amount of tax on the excess. Rent for the purpose of the rule would be taken to be the full amount payable by the occupier, and in arriving at the amount chargeable under the rule a deduction should be made for any portions of the rent wholly or irrevocably lost, portions voluntarily foregone by agreement with the occupier, and for any sums which the person entitled to the rent was obliged to pay out of the rent, any rates or assessments, which, by law, were charged upon the occupier, and for the cost of maintenance, repairs, insurance and management ultimately borne by the person entitled to the rent.

Professor THRIFT said that there were many cases where special expenditure became necessary, not through neglect of premises by the owner, but in cases where leases might fall through. He could give the Minister many cases where over a period of five years the actual profit coming from the property was far less than the annual valuation value. Expense and maintenance had been so high that in five years the property had been an actual loss. He had figures dealing with a number of cottages where the total value amounted to £216, the total rents to £341, while the repairs for five years cost £474. The only repairs allowed when the valuation was considered was from £12 to £15 a year. If that were to be taken as a criterion, the expenses would have been only £55 instead of £474. Surely, it was only fair and reasonable that they should try to get at the value which the property actually was to its owner.

Mr. DOCKRELL (U.I., Dublin County) said that if the Minister did not accept the amendment a number of properties would be worked at a loss, at any rate over periods of years, and if the owners of those properties appealed against the valuation he had no doubt that the courts would take the facts into account and the valuation would be reduced.

A NEW PRINCIPLE.

Mr. MacENTEE, Minister for Finance, said that the amendment introduced a new principle in so far as it was limited to the case of let property. The case had been made that a certain hardship might arise, but it would arise only in special cases. It might arise in the case of cottage property let at an uneconomic rent. He might bring in an amendment on the Report stage of the bill to deal with cases of that sort. Owners of property could appeal to the Revenue Commissioners for the revision of valuations if they were aggrieved.

Mr. COSGRAVE (U.I., Cork City) said that the Minister's suggestion that owners of property should appeal to the Revenue Commissioners was preposterous. If owners had spent money on property in order to improve it the courts should not then be asked to consider revaluation. If the valuation of a house amounted to £20 a year, and the owner spent £12 on repairs, it was obviously unjust to assess income tax on the £20.

The amendment was withdrawn.

THE ONE-SIXTH ALLOWANCE.

Mr. MULCAHY (U.I., North Dublin) moved an amendment to secure that property subject to the provisions of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act should get the one-sixth allowance for repairs.

The MINISTER (Mr. MacENTEE) said that the amendment had no merit. If these people thought that they were unfairly treated they could go to the Commissioner of Valuation and ask for revaluation.

Mr. MULCAHY said that this was penalising a section of the population which had provided houses for people to live in.

Mr. MacENTEE—They have their remedy.

Mr. MULCAHY—A cock-eyed remedy.

The amendment was negatived without division.

Mr. MULCAHY moved an amendment to Section 2, the purport of which, he said, was to restore the repairs allowance in respect of premises which had been acquired by the occupier at any time since May 25th, 1914. As a result of the high rents that were charged, particularly in respect of houses built on Dublin Corporation grants in the earlier years of the establishment of the Saorstat, there was a considerable amount of agitation.

Mr. MacENTEE said that this was going back to the basic principle of whether the present Government was to be asked to remove an anomaly which the previous Government had allowed to exist for ten years. This section had nothing to do with the people who paid rents.

Mr. MULCAHY said that the people he referred to were those who had bought their houses from the Dublin Corporation on the hire purchase system.

Mr. MacENTEE said that those people were occupying houses as owners. If they were occupying them as tenants they would not get the benefit of the law which it was proposed to change, and would have to pay on the rent or valuation.

The amendment was defeated by 41 votes to 18.

A PROTEST.

Professor ALTON (Indt., Dublin University) protested against the withdrawal of the privilege enjoyed by the owner-occupier—namely, an allowance of one-sixth of the tax on the valuation of the premises for repair work. He said that he knew that his protest was hopeless, and that the Minister would turn it down with contempt. It was iniquitous and immoral that such an allowance should be taken away.

Mr. DILLON (U.I., Donegal) said that the inevitable consequence of the acceptance of that section would be that individuals would be called upon to pay income tax on an actual loss.

Professor ALTON said that it was about time that they went into the whole question of taxation. The taxpayer was being mulcted by one and the other. It was perfectly inequitable that the taxpayer should have to pay income tax on money he disbursed on rates.

Mr. MacENTEE quoted a speech made by Mr. Blythe, the previous Minister for Finance, in support of the proposals contained in the section.

Mr. COSTELLO (U.I., Co. Dublin) said that a person buying a house took into account this allowance of one-sixth in respect of repairs, and it was one of the factors that determined price. The very fact that the proposal now sponsored by the Minister for Finance had been defeated in the Oireachtas when proposed by a previous Minister rather strengthened the belief that the method of relief would not be interfered with, and a number of people bought their houses on the understanding that the practice which had maintained for so many years would be continued.

A SOUND PROPOSAL.

THE MINISTER (Mr. MacEntee) said that such an amendment as was proposed in the existing law would not come before the House until the Executive Council was satisfied that it was fair and equitable. The Revenue Commissioners had to safeguard the revenue of the State. He was satisfied that the proposal in the section was sound, reasonable and just. It might be that people, when purchasing houses, took into account this allowance in respect of repairs, but, if they did so, they were gambling on the legislature allowing an anomaly in the law to continue; that was their look out. Apart from that, however, he thought that the importance of the matter had been exaggerated. For instance, the owner-occupier of a house of Poor Law valuation of £45 which could be let at £120 paid £8 8s. 0d. income tax on that house at the rate of 4s. 6d. in the £ under the old law. He would now have to pay £10 2s. 0d. If, however, he chose to let the house, instead of occupying it, he would still have to pay only the £10 2s. 0d., and would still be getting away with it.

The section was carried on a division by 40 votes to 23.

CUSTOMS DUTIES.

THE POOR MAN'S BURDEN.

On Section 7, which enacts the schedule imposing several Customs duties,

Mr. DILLON said there was a matter of general interest arising from the burden that these Customs duties placed on the taxpayers of the country.

Mr. LEMASS asked if it was in order to have a general discussion on tariffs on the Committee stage of the Finance Bill.

Mr. DILLON said that what the members of the Fianna Fail Party did not realise was that the burden of industrial development was being put on the backs of one section of the community, and that the burden of taxation was lifted off the comparatively prosperous and put on the backs of the poor. The Minister for Finance had reduced income tax by sixpence in the £, but met the reduction out of the moneys received from Customs duties. The Customs duties on children's cotton socks, secondhand clothing, and down the entire list, was being paid by the poor of the country. If any Government wanted to shift the burden of taxation from the shoulders of the comparatively rich the easiest way to do it was through the imposition of indiscriminate tariffs.

Mr. LITTLE—Surely this is not in order.

The SPEAKER ruled that the general principle of the section was discussed on second reading, and they could now discuss the details.

Mr. DILLON—I am making the case that Section 7 should not be accepted, and for the reason I have stated. These tariffs tend to raise the retail prices of the protected articles, as had been proved in the case of flour, which was now 5s. a sack dearer than in Liverpool.

THE CONTROL OF PRICES.

It had been stated by the Minister that the Prices Commission would see to it that there would be no unduly high prices charged for the articles mentioned in the schedule of the bill, but what happened? The Prices Commission sat for several months, and eventually came out and said that certain things cannot be done. The prices control machinery had broken down, and would break down so long as there were industrialists determined to break it. They were experts at their particular branch of trade, and in the circumstances they bemused and bewildered the Prices Commission. That was the situation that developed as a result of these tariff burdens, and the Labour Party watched it going on, knowing perfectly well it was going on, and that the burden of taxation was being steadily heaped on the backs of the poor.

He asked the Minister to put an end to the confusion that existed in respect to tariffs at the present moment, for a large number of tariffs had been imposed by financial resolutions and under the Emergency Imposition of Duties Orders.

ISSUE OF LICENCES.

Another important matter was the power of the Minister in consultation with the Minister for Finance to issue licences for free import in particular cases. When it was decided to issue licences he suggested that when they were issued for a finite period in regard to any article that the licence should be granted to every person engaged in that particular line of business if application were made. They had a situation arising in which a man who could state his case clearly secured the licence for which he was looking; and another citizen, equally deserving, who had not the same tenacity, who went without a licence, and had to struggle along as best he could. He wanted to make provision to safeguard against that.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

Mr. MULCAHY, speaking on the section, said that in relation to the imposition of a tariff of 33 1-3 per cent. on cotton piece goods of 4½ ounces to the square yard, a serious situation existed in the shirt-making business as a result of this particular tariff. In one firm sixty girls had been rendered idle since last Thursday because material which arrived at the port had not yet been delivered on the licence that the Minister had power to issue. Another firm, in a day or two, would be in a similar plight. The firm with sixty girls idle had a big order for tennis shirts, and if the order were not executed soon it would probably be lost. The Minister was simply putting on tariffs, and was waiting to see developments.

Mr. LEMASS said that it would be with considerable reluctance that licences for the importation of cotton-sheeting would be issued, because the supply from the Saorstat mills was probably adequate to the demand. It was decided to impose a duty on cotton cloths of a certain class, although the Government had regard to the fact that the existing mills were not capable of supplying the needs of the country. He had not had any representations from manufacturers in respect of delays in the issuing of licences. Any complaints that were received were directed towards delays at the ports, and such delays were largely due to importers failing to produce the necessary documents.

A DONEGAL CASE.

Mr. MULCAHY mentioned the case of a Donegal firm, who complained that they had written on June 4th making application for a licence and who had received a reply by June 16th.

Mr. MULCAHY went on to say that the firm who had the sixty girls idle called to see the Minister on four days in succession and were told to "call back to-morrow."

Mr. LEMASS said that there was no delay in issuing the licences when the applications were made in the proper form.

The section was agreed to.

REVENUE LICENCES.

Mr. DILLON (U.I., Donegal), on behalf of Mr. McGilligan (U.I., National University), moved an amendment providing that all licences issued by the Revenue Commissioners in respect of the free importation of goods shall contain the number and date of granting the licence; the name of the person to whom the licence was issued; the quantity and class of goods to be imported free; the duty for which exemption was granted; the duration of the licence; the statutory authority under which the licence is issued, and other particulars governing the issue of the licence.

Mr. DILLON said that the object of the amendment was to provide that when the Minister issued a licence it would be a licence for one commodity and not for a whole series of commodities.

There was a time when havoc broke out in Donegal owing to the issue of licences. There were people who had coal licences and never handled a couple of tons of coal in their lives, while men who had handled coal all their lives had been unable to get them. There was a notorious case in Carndonagh, where a man got licences to import seeds and coal, while his rivals in the same town was denied them.

Mr. LEMASS, Minister for Industry and Commerce—Mention some particular case.

INFORMATION PROMISED.

Mr. DILLON said that he would give the Minister the information in private. It was a well-established rule in the House that the name of any individual shall not be mentioned except that individual was present to defend himself. The Minister asked for a specific case and he (the speaker) would send him several.

Mr. LEMASS said that the most extraordinary thing about the whole licensing system was that nobody had complained about it but Deputy Dillon. The Department had received from a number of independent sources a number of testimonies to the remarkable efficiency and impartiality on which the licensing authority had been operating.

Mr. DILLON said that he did not suggest that the Minister could be bought by a five-pound note, but that he could be influenced by the prospect of getting five votes.

The amendment was defeated by 41 votes to 22.

THE DUTY ON BEER.

Mr. VINCENT RICE (U.I., Dublin) moved the insertion of a new section providing for a rebate in Excise duty on beer of £1 per thirty-two gallons. He said that before the war period the duty of stout was 7s. 9d. per barrel, but since then it had rapidly increased until it reached the sum of £5—thirteen times the original amount. Stout and porter was the drink of the working man, and it was an extraordinary thing, even for Revenue purposes, to keep on this enormous increase.

No doubt, temperance advocates would say that it was a retrograde step to decrease these duties, but that contention would not hold water for a moment, because long before the heavy duties were put on the consumption of all drink was rapidly decreasing.

Mr. McMENAMIN (U.I., Donegal) asked what right had half-a-dozen total abstainers to gather in a room once a year, pass snowball resolutions, and dominate the rest of the country? He was a total abstainer himself, but if he did take a drink he would be as insistent on having that drink as he was at the moment in being a total abstainer.

Mr. MacENTEE (Minister for Finance)—The amendment would cost half a million pounds, and we are not accepting it.

The amendment was defeated by 35 votes to 18.

Mr. RICE had another amendment regarding the duty on whiskey, but withdrew it, as he said that the argument was similar to the case for the last amendment.

REFUND ON TEA.

MINISTER'S CONCESSION.

Mr. MacENTEE, Minister for Finance, moved an amendment providing for a refund of twopence per lb. on every lb. of tea after the first 500 lb. to merchants who on the 1st July, 1934, had in their possession more than 1,000 lb. of tea on which the duty imposed was paid, and where no portion of that stock had been received after the 16th June, 1934, or received back after delivery on sale.

He said that the rate of refund was half the rate of the decrease of the duty, but they had to bear in mind that a period of seven weeks had been allowed for the disposal of stocks. The first provision in the amendment was for the purpose of preventing people taking advantage of the amendment when it was published, so that they could bring up their stocks to 1,000 lbs. The second was to counter the highly objectionable practice in the trade where, when rumours of an impending increase in the duty arose, some merchants laid in large stocks, and, if there was a decrease in the duty, demanded that their abnormal purchases should be taken back by the wholesaler.

Mr. DILLON (U.I., Donegal) said that he regarded the whole system of retrospective taxation as fundamentally wrong. It was introduced by the British, and their loyal imitator, the present Minister for Finance, copied it.

TRADE CUSTOM.

Mr. COSGRAVE (U.I., Cork City) said that the practice in the trade was not easily adaptable to the regulations of the Revenue Commissioners, and some regard should be had to the difficulties of the trade. It was conceivable that some firms could not allow their stocks to go down to a very low level, and that the Revenue Commissioners would have some difficulty in satisfying themselves in regard to the stocks on 1st July. There was no just reason for not allowing the people what they had paid in duty.

Mr. MacENTEE said that the amendment did not provide for retrospective legislation. It was a concession. He had met the people most representative of the tea trade in the country—members of the Irish Wholesale Tea Traders' Association, and other members of large representative concerns which were not affiliated to that Association. The concession had been given largely because of the fact that the wholesale tea traders had been hampered by a reduction in the duty, and that pending the clearance of existing stocks it was to be presumed that tea merchants and tea blenders would be at a slight disadvantage compared with outside importers.

FORESTALLING THE DUTY.

Mr. COSGRAVE said that the Minister and his party expected that the tea duty would come down on July 1. Suppose a trader had 500lb. of tea, was that trader to be at a loss? Was the Minister going to forestall the duty? Was it to be charged to the people?

Mr. MacENTEE said that he had reason to believe that retailers had in stocks of tea in anticipation of an increase in duty following the Budget. They could not say that there had been any forestalling on the part of the wholesalers. The traders would not have had the same liquidation of stocks as the retailers who had got seven weeks to dispose of their stocks.

The amendment was agreed to. Progress was reported.

POULTRY BILL.

The Committee stage of the Poultry (Diseases) Bill, 1934, and the necessary Money Resolution were passed without discussion, and the Report stage fixed for Thursday.

The House adjourned until 3 p.m. to-day.

DOUBLE TAX PETITION.

PLEA OF REVENUE COMMISSIONERS.

CONTROL OF STOCKS AND SHARES.

(BEFORE THE CHIEF JUSTICE, MR. JUSTICE FITZGIBBON AND MR. JUSTICE MURNAGHAN.)

THE hearing of the appeal of the Revenue Commissioners from a judgment of the High Court on a petition relating to double taxation was continued. The petitioners were the executors of "S. F.," a person of unsound mind, residing in the Irish Free State, and they had paid estate duty to the British Revenue Commissioners on shares to which she became entitled, and which were registered in British companies. The shares had been transferred to the name of the accountant of the Free State Courts, and the executors claimed relief under the Double Taxation (Relief) Order, 1923. The High Court held that they were entitled to this relief, and from that decision the Revenue Commissioners appealed, submitting that the property was not situate in Great Britain, and that, therefore, the executors were not entitled to the relief claimed by them.

Mr. McCann, K.C., and Mr. Geraghty (instructed by Mr. B. Collins, Revenue Solicitor) appeared for the appellants; and Mr. Overend, K.C., and Mr. Bacon (instructed by Messrs. A. J. and A. Robinson) for the respondents.

Opening the case for the respondents, Mr. Overend dealt first with the provisions of the statute under which estate duty was payable, and said that the first thing that struck one on reading Section 1 of the Finance Act of 1894 was that the duty was a duty leviable on the value of something. It was immaterial whether the legal ownership was outstanding or not, and on that section alone he thought it was plain that what the statute was concerned with was beneficial ownership. If there was any doubt about that, it was cleared up by Sections 2 and 3, and he asked the Court to come to the conclusion that the argument on the other side—that the property which passed in this country was of a different kind from that which passed in England—must fall to the ground. His friends on the other side could not say that there was no passing of a legal estate, and at the same time say that duty was payable here.

ACT OF 1871.

The appellants, said Mr. Overend, had misconceived what happened to the estate of a patient who was under the care of the Chief Justice. It seemed to him that the Lunacy Regulations Act of 1871 enabled the statutory attorney to do for the patient what the patient was unable to do for himself, and the moment the patient recovered, the moment he became entitled to his own again, and the Court gave it to him, subject only to what had been done for his benefit in the meanwhile.

The whole jurisdiction committed to the Lord Chancellor by Royal Letter was now by statute vested in the Chief Justice of the Irish Free State. The Committee always acted in the name of the lunatic. Every section contemplated the committee of the estate doing something under the authority of the court in the name and on behalf of the lunatic. The committee virtually, under the ordinary court, took the lunatic's pen and wrote the lunatic's name by statutory power of attorney, and that attorney could only act under the authority of the Lord Chancellor, and now under that of the Chief Justice of the Free State. If the person concerned in this case had regained her sanity and had applied to the Chief Justice for a discharge from lunacy, and had that order been made at the date of her death, there would be no question that she was entitled to relief under the double taxation order. But merely because she had not recovered sanity and the stock happened to be under the jurisdiction of the Accountant-General, she was not to get the relief to which she would otherwise be entitled.

Mr. Overend cited a case which, he said, was material in showing that jurisdiction in lunacy was not exercised to decide the rights of action as between parties, but merely to restrain the committee acting under it, from doing anything prejudicial to the rights of the parties, of whom the lunatic might be one. It left the parties all their rights at law. If that was so in the case of a committee, he said, then, a fortiorari, it was so in the case of the Accountant-General. The Accountant-General was merely a statutory attorney, having authority to execute a document under the authority of the court, and not otherwise.

In further argument Mr. Overend said that the Double Taxation (Relief) Act purported to be passed to enable taxpayers not to pay tax twice in respect of the same subject matter. It would not be open to the Governor-General, on the advice of the Executive Council, to put any words into the order conferring jurisdiction on the Court. For the purpose of the Statute the Courts in this country were self sufficient.

Counsel had not concluded when the Court adjourned until to-day.

CAR PASSENGER INJURED.

(BEFORE MR JUSTICE O'BYRNE AND A JURY.)

A sum of £75 damages was awarded to Benjamin Isaacson, 13 St. Kevin's road, South Circular road, Dublin, in an action against Frank O'Boyle, 'bus proprietor, Spring Garden street, Dublin, for personal injuries received in an accident at the junction of Nottingham street and Northbrook avenue, Dublin. The defendant denied plaintiff's allegation that a 'bus belonging to him was driven in such a manner that it caused his car to collide with a railway bridge standard.

Mr. Basil McGuckin, K.C., and Mr. J. Devlin (instructed by Mr. Victor Elyan) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Martin Maguire, K.C., and Mr. D. Fawsitt (instructed by Messrs. Little, O hUadhaigh and Proud) for the defendant.

FORTUNE MADE IN A SALOON.

EMIGRANT'S WILL IN DISPUTE.

STORY OF DYING MAN'S BEQUESTS.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE SULLIVAN AND A JURY.)

THE hearing was continued of the action of Mrs. Margaret Cunningham, of Ballyhaunis, Co. Mayo, and Mrs. Kate A. Freeley, of 126 La Salle street, Manhattan, New York, against John Greene, of Carrowreagh, Ballyhaunis, in relation to the will of the late Austin Freeley, of Carrowreagh.

In 1879 Austin Freeley, when over 40 years of age, emigrated to the United States, and became the owner of a saloon opposite the Congress Building, New York, in which he amassed a fortune. In 1909 he returned, and settled down in Carrowreagh, where he died on December 29, 1930, leaving cash and property estimated to be worth over £25,000. The will disposing of those assets is now disputed. There were previous legal proceedings admitting it to probate, but the appearance of a new plaintiff rendered another suit necessary.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Margaret Cunningham, is a widow, aged about 91 years, and a sister of the late Austin Freeley, and the plaintiff, Mrs. Kate A. Freeley, another widow, is his niece. They seek to have the previous admission of the will to probate revoked. The defendant, John Greene, is one of the executors. The plaintiffs object to the will on the usual statutory grounds.

Mr. A. E. Wood, K.C., Mr. C. Lavery, K.C., and Mr. John O'Leary (instructed by Mr. Gerald Maguire) appeared for plaintiffs; and Mr. Carson, K.C., Mr. Martin Maguire, K.C., and Mr. E. C. Micks (instructed by Mr. Austin Crean) for the defendant. Mr. C. Conroy (instructed by Mr. A. W. Briscoe) held a watching brief on behalf of Thomas and Sarah Cooney, other next-of-kin of testator.

THE RESIDUE.

Mr. Michael Walsh, solicitor, Ballyhaunis, who made the will and who had given evidence of its execution, was cross-examined by Mr. Wood about the instructions given to Mr. Walsh by the testator—whether, after various minor bequests, he said, "Divide the residue between all my nephews and nieces and my sister, Mrs. Cunningham, and John Greene and Thomas Greene"; or whether he said with a wave of his hand, "You might as well give it to them all." Mr. Walsh said that testator told him about the possession of deposits of £10,000 and £5,000.

Mr. Wood asked Mr. Walsh who was the Thomas Greene to whom the testator purported to leave the Post Office and what did the Post Office consist of—was there not a Thomas Greene, brother of John Greene; a Thomas Greene, father of John Greene, and a Thomas Greene, son of John Greene?

Mr. Walsh replied that there was only one Thomas Greene of Carrowreagh mentioned in the will. A previous will was drawn up by Dr. Smyth. This was given to him by Mr. Crean before he made the last will. As the last will revoked it, it became only a scrap of paper, and he asked the testator what he would do with it. The testator told him to tear it up, and he burned it immediately.

Mr. Carson (re-examining)—Is there any truth in the suggestion implied in Mr. Wood's questions that you perpetrated a fraud in the preparation of this will?—None whatever.

Or that you had any interest in the matter except to carry out the testator's instructions?—I had no other interest whatever in the matter, and that is the true will of the testator.

DOCTOR'S EVIDENCE.

Dr. Andrew Smyth, Ballyhaunis, who had been medical attendant to the testator for about twelve years, said that he visited the testator and found him suffering from a small cerebral hæmorrhage. Witness took a serious view of his condition, and asked him if there was anything he wished to be done. Freeley answered, "I have most of my affairs settled, but I don't want to see John Greene wronged; I want to leave the money in the bank to John Greene." Witness wrote that down at his request, and he signed it, stating "I will make a complete will later on." Freeley did so later on in the presence of witness and Nurse Whiteside. He was perfectly clear. Some time later Mr. Crean, a solicitor, and Mr. McNelis arrived and saw the old man, who was dozing. Mr. Crean asked him if there was anything he could do regarding his affairs, and he said "No, I am tired." Witness then handed the will he had executed to Mr. Crean.

The witness, in further evidence, said that the testator's mental condition was not affected. He saw him again about 9.30 p.m. On this occasion he was accompanied by Mr. Walsh, solicitor, Ballyhaunis. The testator gave Mr. Walsh his instructions for his will, and he was quite clear mentally at the time. Mr. Walsh wrote the will out, and he advised the solicitor that it would be better to get the signature by mark, as he thought it better not to disturb the sick man by getting him to sit up in bed. Witness and Nurse Whiteside then witnessed the will.

Dr. John McGrath, State pathologist, was examined by Mr. Maguire, and said that he had heard the evidence of Dr. Smyth, and agreed with him in his diagnosis regarding what the testator was suffering from. The cerebral hæmorrhage would cause shock and confusion lasting a variable time, depending on the amount of hæmorrhage. It was quite reasonable to assume that the mind and memory of the testator were quite normal shortly after the attack. This would likely continue until the hæmorrhage recurred which resulted in his death.

In reply to Mr. Lavery, the witness said that his opinion was on the entire side of Dr. Smyth's evidence.

WATCH HANDED UP.

The Rev. Patrick Moane, C.C., Ballyhaunis, said that he had known Austin Freeley for about seven years. On December 27, 1930, he was called to attend at Carrowreagh, and saw Austin Freeley in his house in bed, drowsy, but conscious and clear in mind. Having administered the Sacraments to him witness was about to leave, when John Greene asked him to take charge of a sum of money—about £22—and a watch belonging to the testator. Mrs. Cunningham, the sister, consented, and witness took charge of the money, which he lodged with the bank manager, Mr. McNelis.

To Mr. Wood, witness said that he thought it was Thomas Greene who came for him to attend the old man. He did not remember telling Mrs Cunningham before he left the house at 6 p.m. to order a habit; nor did he recollect blessing the habit at 8 p.m. when he was paying a second visit to the house. He never told people to order habits.

Further questioned, Father Moane said that with regard to the money handed to him by Greene, he thought the reason was that there were conflicting parties in the house, and it was thought better that he should take charge, so that there would not be any accusations afterwards if money got mislaid. The suggestion was approved by the family.

Miss Jane Whiteside, a trained nurse, said that she found the testator clear in his mind when she witnessed a will drawn up by Dr. Smyth. She did not see Father Moane bless a habit got by Mrs. Cunningham.

The Rev. Michael Flynn, Sligo, said that he had known Austin Freeley, who was very clever and shrewd, and who was very fond of a game of cards. "He would not spend a penny," said Father Flynn, "if it was possible to avoid it, and his business affairs was the one thing he would never discuss." On the 20th December, 1930, Austin Freeley came to his house in Castlerea, Co. Roscommon, along with John Greene, who went for the Postmaster, whom Austin Freeley wanted to see about repairs at Ballyhaunis P.O. Freeley began to talk about John Greene when the latter was out, saying that he hoped to leave John Greene very well off. He described John Greene as a very hard-working boy, and hard work was what he admired most. He also said he would do "well" for Thomas Greene. He expressed an intention to buy a flat tomb for himself. Witness added that whenever he went to Carrowreagh he saw John and Thomas Greene attending on the old man; but he never saw Mrs. Cunningham in the house.

The hearing will be continued to-day.

NEWS SUMMARY.

IRELAND.

Unsuccessful efforts were made by the Opposition in the Dail yesterday to bring down the rate of income tax below the British level and to reduce the duty on beer and spirits.—(Page 5.)

We print to-day the text of a letter addressed on behalf of the Minister for Local Government and Public Health to the Mayor of Sligo, conveying the Minister's demands in regard to the letting of Corporation houses and the demolition of condemned dwellings.—(Page 7.)

In his speech at Edenderry yesterday General O'Duffy said that he believed that a republic for the twenty-six counties would be the worst thing possible. If, however, the Irish people decided that they should have a republican form of government, he would fall in behind Mr. de Valera. The County Councils of Leix, Tipperary, Waterford and Kilkenny, he said, had been suppressed because in those constituencies the League of Youth organisation would have a walk-over in the Local Government elections. When they got Captain Hughes out of jail and disposed of some court actions, however, they would see that elections were held in these four centres, and Fianna Fail would not obtain a quota.—(Page 8.)

The clause in the new Northern Ireland Unemployment Bill imposing a five years' residence qualification on "transfers" from the Free State before they are entitled to benefit was discussed in the Northern Senate yesterday.—(Page 7.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Government's Betting and Lotteries Bill passed its third reading in the House of Lords last night.—(Page 6)

"A Damned Good Job."

During recent weeks there have been many rumours in Dublin and London of an impending settlement of the so-called "economic war" between Great Britain and the Free State. Intermediaries of one kind and another are supposed to have been at work in an effort to find common ground on which President de Valera and Mr. J. H. Thomas could meet, with a view to the discovery of a formula whereby some kind of modus vivendi might be arranged. Hopes were aroused in many quarters. The people, sick at heart of the long and pointless struggle, were ready to clutch at any straw, and the atmosphere seemed to be favourable to a genuine move towards peace. During the last few days, however, speeches have been made on both sides of the Channel which suggest that the gulf between Britain and the Free State is as wide as ever it was. In the House of Commons on Monday the Chancellor of the Exchequer refused to encourage any hopes of an early settlement. He even went so far as to say that he could give no guarantee that, if a settlement should be concluded, His Majesty's Government would annul the heavy duties that have been imposed on Free State exports. The whole tone of his speech was such as to indicate clearly that the British Government is in no way anxious to come to terms with President de Valera. Mr. Chamberlain told the House of Commons that the land annuities issue was only incidental in a political dispute. By next March, he said, the Free State would be in default to the amount of £14,512,000, and the special duties would have yielded about £10,000,000 to the Exchequer. In these circumstances, apparently, the British Government is quite content to allow the "economic war" to continue.

Senator Connolly, the Free State Minister for Lands and Forests, was even more uncompromising than Mr. Chamberlain in a speech which he made on Sunday at Strokestown, Co. Roscommon. "It is a damned good job," he is reported to have said, "that the English cattle market has gone, as it will make the farmers realise that they must take off their coats and till the land." When responsible politicians speak in terms of this kind, the ordinary man cannot be blamed if he has come almost to despair. Mr. Chamberlain's views are his own business. Nobody in this country has any right to dictate to the British Government. Time is on its side in the "economic war," and, although one might expect more magnanimity from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, every sensible Irishman recognises the fact that the British have no particular reason to wish for an early settlement. Senator Connolly's statement is a very different matter. During the last twelve months or so the Free State Government has been doing everything in its power to save the stock raisers from the effects of the British duties. Large subsidies have been granted to exporters; yet a prominent member of the Government, who almost may be regarded as the President's alter ego, describes the collapse of the cattle trade as "a damned good job." How can the two facts be reconciled? Does President de Valera agree with his colleague; and, if he does agree, why does he not repeal the bounties and subsidies which are costing the general tax-payer large sums of money? While statements such as that of Senator Connolly are being made in the Free State, we cannot expect much sympathy from the British Government; and thus we find ourselves entangled in a vicious circle which nobody has the courage to break.

One turns with relief from the futilities of the politicians to the statesmanlike utterance of Cardinal MacRory at Maynooth yesterday. He was speaking with special reference to our internal dissensions, but his remarks apply with equal force to the dispute between the Free State and Great Britain. He made a powerful plea for the banishment of political animosities, and besought the people to recognise the sincerity of their opponents and agree to differ. The Free State and Great Britain cannot be expected to see eye to eye on all things. Seven hundred years of eventful history cannot be cancelled in a decade. Nevertheless, for better or for worse, the inhabitants of this island must continue to live within sixty miles of Britain's shores, and the people of the Free State cannot ignore the accomplished fact of Northern Ireland. We believe, as we always have believed, that the "economic war" could be settled in a very short time if anybody in the Free State would show the slightest sign of a desire for peace. Senator Connolly's shouts of defiance can do no possible good. Actually, they are doing inestimable harm, and the cold indifference of Mr. Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons ought to convince even the densest adherent of Fianna Fáil that nothing can be gained by continued intransigeance. We have no doubt that faces must be saved on both sides. All political settlements are camouflaged to some extent in order to spare politicians' feelings; but when one realises that Germany and Poland have been able to compose their differences—not out of any love for each other, but on grounds of mutual expediency—surely there ought to be no insuperable difficulties in the way of an Anglo-Saorstát agreement. The important thing is the first step; and the side with the greater moral courage will take it.

Across the Border.

Northern Ireland's latest blow at the Free State reached the Committee stage in the Senate yesterday. It takes the form of a clause in the Unemployment Insurance Bill—which, in most other respects, is modelled on the parent British measure—enacting that any worker from the Free State who moves into Northern Ireland must have resided there for five years before he can obtain unemployment benefit. The clause bears more than a trace of the bitterness which has marked Northern and Southern relations ever since Ireland became two States; but it possesses at the same time a strong element of logic. For some years past there has been a quiet seepage of workers across the border from the Free State, which has not been balanced by a corresponding emigration from North to South. Viscount Craigavon and his disciples realise that this seepage is likely to continue so long as President de Valera's "new deal" renders steady employment a matter of good luck, and they are determined that the Free State's deadweight shall not be unloaded on their own fair counties. The North, indeed, seems to have developed a strong distaste for any penetration by Free State citizens, whether or not they cost her money. Her Unemployment Insurance Bill follows hard on the heels of the Representation of the People Bill, which, with other things, insists that no immigrant to Northern Ireland shall have the right to vote until he shall have resided there for seven years. Viscount Craigavon's constituencies are reasonably secure, but he is resolved to prevent a Nationalist majority from growing up through accretions from below the border. His action is merely another instance of the unnatural relations that exist between the two States of Ireland. In thirteen years there has not been the slightest effort to establish a normally courteous modus vivendi. The two Governments of this one small country are further estranged from each other than any two neighbouring States, however diverse in blood, on any other part of the earth. If our Governments are not prepared to coalesce into one, they might be expected, at least, to live side by side in friendship; but the dominant idea of both, as it seems, is to profess its undying antagonism to the other, and to translate that antagonism into petty acts of spite. We could dislike these latest measures of the Northern Government with greater sincerity if they were not paralleled by equally deplorable acts and utterances on the part of successive Saorstát Governments. Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly's recent threats against the North have been enough in themselves to retard the date of Irish unity by another thirty years. It is tragic to watch the gulf thus widened by the jealousy and stupidity of our politicians.

The Biggest Ship.

Sometimes the spirit of emulation takes a very childish form. Two great liners of almost identical size are being constructed at present—one at Clydebank and the other at St. Nazaire. It is estimated that both the British "534" and the French Normandie will be in the neighbourhood of 73,000 tons; but it is still uncertain which of them will be able to claim that it is the largest ship in the world. Actual size, of course, is important in these matters; for it means room for more passengers, greater engine power or better accommodation. The French authorities, however, wishing to put their title to the largest ship beyond doubt, have decided to increase the size of the Normandie in a rather curious manner. "Gross tonnage" is calculated in terms of the enclosed space on a ship, and the Normandie's builders find that they can increase her weight, theoretically, to 79,000 tons by decking-in certain parts that have been left open. The additions will be of no advantage whatever, and will make almost no difference to the real size or weight of the liner, but what matter? They will enable France to claim the Normandie as the largest ship afloat. There is a precedent for this absurdity. When Germany owned the Bismarck and the Vaterland, the former was 900 tons larger than the latter. That condition of affairs became altered, as if by magic, on their surrender, and the addition of a little superstructure made the re-named Leviathan "the biggest ship in the world." No doubt, the British builders can outdo the French by adding still more decking to "534," if they think it really essential to reply to the stratagem in kind. The whole procedure, however, reminds us of the man who made his house higher than his neighbour's by putting a longer wireless mast on the roof.

Hard Times.

In spite of every effort to diminish them, distress and poverty still prevail to an alarming extent in the city of Dublin. The weekly relief figures of the Dublin Board of Assistance show clearly that the position is much worse than it was even a few years ago, and the charitable societies are finding their resources taxed to the uttermost. At the annual meeting of the Sick and Indigent Roomkeepers' Society yesterday, it was shown that, while the need for help is greater than ever, the power to give that help tends rather to diminish. Last year the Society dealt with 4,871 families, representing over 20,000 persons, at a cost of £3,155. Compared with 1932, there is an increase of £307 in the money distributed and 244 in the families assisted; yet the subscriptions received in 1933 amounted to £221 less than in 1932. Subscribers, perhaps, cannot be blamed altogether for this falling-off in their support of the oldest charity in Dublin. In recent years the tightening of purse-strings has become general, and the state of affairs that has led many families to destitution has led to lack of money among those who wish to help them. At the same time, we would urge all who can support these charities to do so; for the need is great. Such organisations as the Sick and Indigent Roomkeepers' Society are helping hundreds of poor people to maintain their homes and to keep out of the workhouse. By providing money, food and clothes, they give these people a chance to tide over evil times without losing their self-respect.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT.

ALL-PARTY CONFERENCE AT LEINSTER HOUSE.

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

A meeting representative of all parties in the Dail took place in Leinster House last evening for the purpose of discussing the terms of the forthcoming Criminal Law (Amendment) Bill. The proceedings were private, but it is understood that the members present were informed of the proposals to be made in the bill. These will follow pretty closely the recommendations made by the committee which reported on the subject some years ago. That report, it will be recalled, was never published. The purpose of the Government is to get their bill through the Dail as speedily as possible and with the minimum of discussion.

The deputies present were:—Messrs. P. J. Ruttledge, Minister; James Geoghegan, K.C.; Conor A. Maguire, K.C.; William Davin, Desmond Fitzgerald, J. FitzGerald-Kenney, K.C.; W. Thrift, Dan Morrissey and Peadar S Doyle. Mr. J. Duff and Mr. J. O'Connor, of the Department of Justice, were present.

THE SECOND CHAMBER.

TRINITY COLLEGE DEBATE.

"USELESS" MOTION LOST.

"THAT Second Chambers are either useless or mischievous" was the subject of a debate by the College Historical Society in Trinity College, Dublin, last night. Sir Robert Tate presided.

Mr. J. W. Wellwood (Sch.), Auditor-Elect, in opening the debate, welcomed the President and Vice-President of the Cambridge Union, and referred to the friendly relations existing between the University of Cambridge and Trinity College.

The test of government was its ability to safeguard the welfare of the people and to ensure to all the necessities of life. More and more the politician was becoming the economist, and government was becoming the administration of things rather than the control of men. State planning had become the order of the day for all governments, and efficiency, precision and speed were necessary if the governmental machine were to function properly. In this light Second Chambers were unnecessary—they were only a brake on the progress of the modern State. He warned those present against allowing their ideas on the subject to be too much influenced by Anglo-Saxon political ideas and institutions. The House of Lords, though the mother of all Second Chambers in the world, was really a relic of feudalism.

SECOND THOUGHTS.

Senator Comyn, K.C., who opened on the negative side, said that it was amazing the amount of repair, reconstruction and improvement that was required to make the work of the first chamber workable. A second chamber gave the people an opportunity for second thoughts. The only way democracy could rule the world was on two legs—that was by two Houses.

Mr. Geoffrey de Freilas, President of the Cambridge University Union, continued in the affirmative, and said that second chambers had been a mere accident. They were not essential to parliamentary government, and clearly not essential to democratic government. The hereditary second chamber was, surely, opposed to the ideas of democracy. The chamber could not be satisfactory from a democratic point of view, except where democratically elected. It was said that it was the function of the second chamber to revise, but if they believed that democracy meant that government should be entrusted to the people, then the Government should have power to govern.

NEED FOR SECOND CHAMBER.

Count D. M. Tolstoy Miloslavsky, Vice President-elect of the Cambridge Union, in supporting the negative, mentioned the pleasure he had in visiting Ireland, and said that he was a quarter Irish. He said that the opener of the debate had spent much time in attacking the House of Lords, but would remind him that second chambers could be constituted in many different ways. A second chamber was necessary to check hasty legislation, and the burden of proof that they were either useless or mischievous was on those who wanted to abolish second chambers.

Mr. D. de Vere White (affirmative) and Mr. R. G. Leonard, K.C. (negative) also spoke. The latter suggested that at each general election twenty-four senators should retire, and that the majority in the Dail should elect eight new senators and the Opposition sixteen senators to fill the vacancies.

Mr. W. H. Hurley, B.A., Corresponding Secretary, supported the affirmative.

Senator Gogarty and Dr. R. J. Rowlette, T.D., spoke on the negative side. The latter said that a second chamber left time for consideration.

Sir Robert Tate put the motion and declared it lost.

BETTING BILL.

THIRD READING IN THE LORDS.

FROM OUR PARLIAMENTARY CORRESPONDENT.
*WESTMINSTER, Thursday.

CHINESE PIRATES STILL AT LARGE.

WARSHIPS AND AEROPLANES JOIN IN THE SEARCH.

TROOPS ALSO START IN PURSUIT OF BANDITS.

ENGLISHMEN AMONG THE CAPTIVES.

BRITISH, American and Japanese warships, and British aeroplanes from the aircraft carrier Eagle, are continuing the search for the Chinese pirates who, on Monday, captured two British naval lieutenants and twenty-four members of the crew and passengers, including three other Englishmen, from the British steamer Shuntein.

The Shuntein was attacked between Taku and Chefoo, in the Gulf of Chihli. She was bound from Tangku for Shanghai, by way of Chefoo.

It is believed that the pirates are heading for the Yellow River.

The Nanking Government has instructed the North China military authorities to make every effort to capture the pirates and rescue the captives.

BELIEVED TO HAVE TAKEN TO THE HILLS.

A CHEFOO telegram of yesterday's date states that in response to urgent wires from the Chinese authorities at Chefoo, General Han Fu-chu, Governor of Shantung, has dispatched a detachment of troops to the Lin-ching district, thirty miles from the mouth of the Yellow River, whither the pirates are believed to be heading.

Meanwhile the British Legation in Nanking is reported to be making representations to the Chinese Government, and Lieutenant R. V. Dewar-Durie, of the office of the Military Attaché, is being sent to Tsinan to-night to maintain contact with General Han Fu-chu, and assist in measures to rescue the captives.

The Chinese Foreign Office also is giving the matter its closest attention.

THE CAPTIVES.

Among the captives are:—

Lieutenant P. L. Field, of the submarine Oswald, 4th Submarine Flotilla China Station;

Lieutenant J. D. Luce, of the submarine Osiris, also 4th Flotilla;

Mr. Henry MacDowall Watson, third engineer of the Shuntein;

Mr. George L. Drand, second officer of the Shuntein;

Mr. G. D. Nicholl, a Shanghai insurance expert; and

Mr. Yamamoto, a Japanese.

Mr. Shen-Tien-Lin, at one time Minister of the Interior at Peking, is one of the twenty Chinese captives. The condition of Mr. John Pryde Ross, the third officer of the Shuntein, who was wounded in the affray, is reported to be slightly worse. Mr. Ross, who is twenty-five years old, was born in Shanghai. He has been with Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, the owners of the Shuntein, for a year.

AMERICAN WOMEN.

All the non-Chinese passengers on board were British, with the exception of Mr. Yamamoto and three Americans—Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Learmouth and Miss Spengler.

The news that there was a Japanese among the captives brought a Japanese cruiser, the Enryu, to Chefoo at full speed, and she is now standing by. The rest of the international force consists of four British destroyers, and the aircraft carrier Eagle, the American destroyer Pope and the mine-sweeper Bittern, as well as a Chinese Customs cruiser.

As a further measure, it is understood that the British authorities are seeking permission from the Chinese Government to search inland with aeroplanes from the Eagle.

NO CLUE.

So far there is no clue to the pirates' whereabouts, and no demands for ransom have been made. It is believed that they may have taken to the hills.

It is confirmed that the mail carried by the Shuntein was untouched.

The registration numbers of the junks used by the pirates to take their prisoners ashore show two of them to belong to Chefoo, while the other three are registered at Tientsin.

A cable was received at the London office of the China Navigation Company yesterday giving brief details of the capture of the British subjects.

The cable reads: "Shuntien attacked and looted off Yellow River. Five British passengers and crew kidnapped."

The Admiralty received news of the outrage on Monday night from the Commander-in-Chief, China Station. Yesterday the Admiralty was without any further news.

MR. BRAND'S LETTER.

A brother of Mr. Brand, whose parents live at Torry, Aberdeen, told a reporter last night that his brother was serving with the China Navigation Company, and had not been home for three years. In a letter to his parents, received on Monday, Mr. George Brand stated that he was "standing by" a new ship, but he did not mention the name of the ship.

They had received no information regarding Mr. Brand's capture, but they had wired to the agents.

The parents of Mr. Brand last night received the following telegram from the owners of the Shuntein:—

"We confirm George Leiper Brand kidnapped by Chinese pirates. Will advise you immediately we receive further information."

Mr. Brand, who is a single man, is twenty-seven years of age.

Mrs. Watson, of Boyndie street, Banff, said that her son, Henry McDowall Watson, was second engineer in the China Navigation Company's vessel, Shan Tung, when he wrote last to her, but probably he had been transferred to the Shuntein. She also had telegraphed for information.

LOOTING THE SHIP.

PRISONERS HURRIED ASHORE.

The pirates boarded the steamer as passengers at Tangku, and at a given signal and at the point of the gun, they secured control of the bridge, the wireless and engine-room. They gained control of the vessel 70 miles from Tannekin and held it for 24 hours. Half of them ransacked the ship, while the others covered the officers, crew and passengers. The pirates worked fast, and evidently the affair was well planned. No sooner was the looting completed than five junks appeared alongside. The loot was lowered into them. About twenty Chinese passengers were picked out and ordered into the junks. Then six non-Chinese were ordered to board the junks on pain of instant death if they refused.

The Chief of the Police of the Tientsin area, Mr. Iremonger, was a passenger on the steamer, but was not captured. After the attack the pirates hurried their prisoners ashore.

H.M. destroyers Witch and Veteran met the Shuntien at 11 o'clock this morning and escorted her to Chefoo.

WOMEN'S ORDEAL.

A graphic story of the pirates' attack and of the ordeal of the British women and children on board was told to a reporter by Captain Christiansen, who was in command when the vessel returned to Chefoo early this morning.

"The attack occurred," he said, "at 10.30 on Sunday evening, when about 30 armed pirates gained control of the ship. Several of them first held-up the two wireless operators and imprisoned them in the smoke-room.

"I myself hearing a disturbance, left my cabin, and was immediately 'held-up' by three armed pirates, and also escorted to the smoke-room. Mr. Ross, the third officer, who was on watch, left the bridge to assist me, and was shot and badly wounded. At the same time two deck officers and two engineers were 'held-up' and imprisoned in the smoke-room with us, where we all remained until five yesterday afternoon, when the pirates finally left the ship.

JUNKS ON THE SCENE.

"During the time the marauders were aboard," contained the captain, "the bridge was in charge of a pirate who was evidently an experienced seaman. He navigated the vessel towards the mouth of the Yellow River, where five junks were lying to.

"The Shuntien was brought alongside these junks, which may, or may not, have been in league with the pirates. At any rate, they were commandeered. Our vessel was then run aground on the soft bottom of the river-mouth, but was easily refloated with the tide soon after the pirates left. The pirates did no material damage—they did not even destroy the ship's wireless, which began to operate shortly after they left. No cargo was taken either, but the passengers' belongings were completely looted, the baggage being strewn about the deck, while the pirates selected what they fancied. They took spectacles and all jewellery and money.

IN DRESS SUITS.

"At first the dress suits and patent leather shoes puzzled them, but eventually they put them on, and departed wearing the weirdest assortment of garments, leaving their own ragged clothing behind on the deck. They even robbed two small British children named Hutcheon of the trinkets they were wearing." Mrs. Hutcheon protected her two little children, and acted with the greatest coolness and bravery. Mr. Handley Derry was on board with his wife, but he was unmolested.

"When the pirates selected the first officer I protested that he was necessary to navigate the ship, and the pirates agreed to leave him and take the second officer, Mr. Drand, instead.

A REPRISAL.

"The marauders told the ship's compradore (native purser) that they were Shantung smugglers, and were committing piracy as a reprisal against the Chinese Customs, which recently stationed extra cruisers along that part of the Shantung coast where they habitually operate."

How the pirates looted her cabin before her eyes and afterwards served her with coffee and sandwiches was described by Mrs. Hutcheon. She and her two children, she said, were asleep when the raid occurred, and were awakened by the sound of firing. Shortly afterwards the pirates entered her cabin, and took everything portable, including cash, jewellery and even the bedding, and Mrs. Hutcheon's personal linen.

SERVED WITH COFFEE.

Then she and the other women and children were shut in the second class saloon. The pirates not only made no attempt to molest them, but even served them with coffee and sandwiches before they left the ship.

All the passengers joined with Mrs. Hutcheon in speaking in the highest terms of the captain and officers, who rendered every assistance possible in the difficult circumstances.

JAPANESE-AMERICAN NAVAL TALKS.

THE RATIO PROBLEM.

Mr. Norman Davis, President Roosevelt's "Ambassador at Large," called upon the Japanese Ambassador yesterday morning and had a friendly discussion with him upon naval matters. Mr. Davis, Reuter learns, informed Mr. Matsudaira of the course of the discussions on Monday between Great Britain and the United States. The vexed problem of the naval ratio was definitely not touched upon at this interview, although, according to the American delegation, the ratio has not been ruled out of the naval discussions.

"Nothing is ruled out," was the comment in American circles. "Discussions are, however, at such a preliminary stage that one cannot say so far that very much has been ruled in."

Mr. Davis informed Mr. Matsudaira that he would maintain contact with him throughout the discussions, and would keep him posted as to developments.

UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFIT.

NEW NORTHERN MEASURE.

WORKERS FROM THE FREE STATE.

DISCRETIONARY POWER OF MINISTER.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Tuesday.

THE clause in the new Northern Ireland Unemployment Bill that a worker from the Irish Free State who transfers to Northern Ireland must reside here for five years before he can obtain unemployment benefit, was discussed in the Northern Senate to-day, when the bill was in committee.

Mr. Leslie asked if there was any counterpart to this clause in the British bill. He asked if the Minister had power to modify this five years' period in difficult cases.

MANY OUT OF WORK.

Mr. Joseph Cunningham said that the Minister of Labour would be very negligent of the interests of the workers in Northern Ireland if he did not include such a clause in the bill. There were a tremendous number of people still unemployed in Northern Ireland. It was right to see that people from across the border did not come in and take these people's work.

They had youths of 19 years of age who had not yet been able to get any work, and it would be a very bad thing if people from over the border should get work under such circumstances.

MINISTER'S POWERS.

The Minister of Labour said that there was no corresponding clause in the British Bill. In the first place, they had no land border, and that circumstance altered the case. He had a discretionary power in regard to the five years' residence, which he hoped to discreetly use. For instance, if a man was born in Northern Ireland, and lived here for the greater portion of his life, and later for a certain time went to reside in the Free State, when he returned home he (the Minister) would have power under the regulations to grant him benefit earlier than five years.

Mr. McAllister asked what would be the position of a man who left Northern Ireland for one of the new factories started, perhaps, by his employer, in the Free State.

AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN.

The Minister said that the clause would not be harshly administered in the case of Northern Ireland men who for a period may have to reside in the Free State.

Mr. Leslie said that under these circumstances he would not move an amendment which he had on the paper dealing with the subject.

MILK BILL THROUGH COMMITTEE.

PROTEST AGAINST RUSHING.

A protest against the rushing through the House of the Milk and Milk Products Bill was made by Senator Leslie (U.) when the Senate was about to go into Committee on the measure.

He opposed the motion that the Committee stage be taken, and went on to say that in the House of Commons the bill possed its second reading on a Thursday, and the following day passed through all its remaining stages. It could not be said that the bill had received the consideration it should have. The Senate should not put the measure into commission until some little time had elapsed to enable them to see what its effects would be.

Mr. McAllister (Nat.) supported Mr. Leslie, and said that only that morning he had received twenty amendments to the measures before the House, but had not time to deal with them, even in a casual way. He thought that the pressure to rush the bill through was coming from elsewhere.

A DIFFICULT MATTER.

Viscount Charlemont, Leader of the House, said that this was a difficult matter to reply to, because there was, undoubtedly, some substance in these objections. Unfortunately, however, there were several very good reasons for urgency. The bill had to be ready for the next sitting of the other House, and there were other reasons, 200,000 he believed.

Senator Leslie—For the creameries.

The motion was carried by 14 votes to 5.

THE MILK COUNCIL.

In reply to Senator Pakenham (U.), the Minister of Agriculture (Sir Basil Brooke) said that in regard to appointments to the Milk Council, he hoped that the gentlemen he obtained to carry out this difficult and useful work would be men of high standing in the North, not necessarily connected—in fact, he thought it would be inadvisable to have them connected with either the producing or the distributing side of the milk business. They would be men conversant with all the facts.

The bill passed the Committee stage.

KILDARE DEALER FINED £300.

ATTEMPTED EVASION OF DUTIES.

Hugh McGovern (31), of Ryebank House, Kilcock, Co. Kildare, was fined £300, with £42 costs, by the Liverpool stipendiary magistrate yesterday on a charge of having been knowingly concerned in a fraudulent attempt to evade Customs duties on 123 cattle imported from Ireland.

It was alleged that false declarations were made both about the prices of cattle and the place where they were being delivered. The cattle had been sold for considerably higher prices than those given to the Customs. Some cattle were declared to be sold to a man at Manchester. They were really sold to farmers in Derbyshire and Norfolk.

For the defence it was stated that the import duties on Irish cattle killed McGovern's business. He could not earn a living if he had to pay full duty.

McGovern was given ten days in which to pay.

IMPALED ON SPIKE.

ANTRIM WORKER'S FATE.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BALLYCASTLE, Tuesday.

Wm. McAuley, Castle street, Ballycastle, a middle-aged labourer, lost his life this afternoon while engaged removing ivy at the Northern Bank premises here. Apparently missing his footing, he fell a distance of about ten feet and was impaled on an iron railing below. One of the spikes penetrated his heart and he expired in a few moments.

INCOME TAX CANNIBAL.

FEEDING ON OTHER TAXES.

MR. DILLON ON THE REPAIR OF POCKETS.

BY OUR SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE.

THERE are more things in this business of income tax than the average income tax payer—let alone Peel, who gave it a somewhat apologetic parentage, under the delusion that he was bringing into the world a puny infant preordained to an early death—ever dreamt of. Who would imagine, for instance, that income tax may be a tax on taxes (or rather rates, which, so far as the victim is concerned, amounts to the same thing), or even a tax on losses?

It was Professor Thrift who, while the Finance Bill was proceeding through its Committee stage in the Dail yesterday, mentioned an actual instance of its being a tax on losses, though Mr. MacEntee airily dismissed this as being a "peculiar" case, and Professor Alton, who showed how it may be a cannibalistic tax feeding on another tax. They were both dealing with aspects of section two of the bill, which is the section that abolishes the allowance for repairs hitherto enjoyed by owner-occupiers in respect of income tax on house property.

Professor Thrift, who moved an amendment to the section to provide that property owners should be allowed a rebate in cases where the valuation is shown to have been greater than the net income in rent, after allowing for the landlord's expenditure, declared that he could see only one possible argument for the Minister to use against him, which was the greater simplicity of a system of charging on valuation. Mr. MacEntee, while holding out the prospect of a Ministerial amendment on report stage to meet the case of cottages let at uneconomic rents, contended, however, that in regard to other property equity could be gained by an appeal to the Commissioner of Valuation.

IMPROVEMENTS AND REPAIRS.

Mr. Cosgrave ridiculed the suggestion that the Commissioner would be inclined to reduce the valuation because the owner had spent money on improvements, and was in no way shaken by the Minister's subtle distinction between improvements and repairs. Mr. Dillon, back in the House for the first time after his holiday, lost no time in returning to the fray, and intervened to argue that the result of turning down the amendment would be that "the landlord won't repair."

"He won't own," interjected Professor Thrift, still more pessimistically.

However, he withdrew the amendment "for the present," and Mr. MacEntee proceeded to apply the same objections to other amendments which Mr. Mulcahy brought forward for relieving aggrieved property-owners. His faith in the all-sufficient Commissioners of Valuation was assailed by Mr. Dillon's citation of the hypothetical case of a local authority which secured a downward revaluation of its house property, and, consequently, reduced the yield of rates.

"The proposal is," said Mr. Dillon, illustrating his parable with suitable gestures, "that the local authority should thrust their hands into this pocket to draw out a sufficient sum to replenish that pocket, and, having replenished that pocket, thrust their hands into that pocket to draw out a sufficient sum to replenish this. When they have worn holes in both their pockets the Minister may bring in a section in 1935 that local authorities may apply to the Revenue Commissioners for a rebate for repairs to their pockets and to their sleeves."

"All I am concerned with," said Mr. MacEntee, reassuringly, "is that they do not put their hands into our pocket."

TAXES ON TAXES.

Having swept aside all the amendments seriatim, the Minister was faced with a vigorous attack from Professor Alton, before the section passed, on the withdrawal of the repairs allowance. Pointing out that the proposal was a very old one, the Professor remarked that it was Mr. Blythe who first brought into the Dail this baby which the Minister was now nursing so tenderly. "It was a very poor foundling," he declared.

"I know," he added, "that I shall be met with the cliche 'You can't have it both ways'; but the people who are really having it both ways are the authorities. They are taxing people on their rates—in other words, levying taxes on taxes."

The Minister's remarkable answer was to read out verbatim the speech which Mr. Blythe made when introducing the proposal on the occasion to which Professor Alton had referred. It transpired that on that occasion the proposal was passed by the Dail, rejected by the Senate, and then confirmed in its rejection on re-submission to the Dail. This volte face by the Dail was accounted for, according to the Minister, by the fact that Mr. Cosgrave "fell into a trap set by either Professor Thrift or Professor Alton," and, according to Professor Alton, by the fact that it was first rushed through the Dail, and that, after having time to think it over, deputies saw it in a different light. This time there was no conversion, and the section was passed.

UNYIELDING.

With the same stubbornness, characteristic of Finance Ministers, Mr. MacEntee set his face against Mr. Cosgrave's amendment relating to stallions' fees, Mr. Vincent Rice's pleas for rebates on the liquor duties, and Mr. McGilligan's fundamental amendment for the reduction of the standard rate of income tax to four shillings—an amendment which was fortified by Mr. Mulcahy's reminder of the decrease in yield which has resulted from the increase in the rate since the Government came into office, and Mr. Cosgrave's insistence upon the surpluses in the Fianna Fail budgets.

From the division figures it would seem that approximately one-third of the personnel of the House is interested in the subject of taxation. On the amendment for reduction of the standard rate the voting was fifteen in favour and thirty-seven against.

BRITISH TRADE WITH FRANCE.

EFFECT OF THE NEW AGREEMENT.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Runciman (President of the Board of Trade) informed Mr. George Hall (Labour) that a trade agreement between the United Kingdom and France was initialled on last Saturday, and that it was expected that it would be signed very shortly. The arrangements embodied in the agreement would then be brought provisionally into force pending ratification. He was not in a position to give details of the agreement pending its signature, but it would result, among other things, in the restoration to this country of her full share in the French import quotas, and in the withdrawal of the twenty per cent. surtax on certain French goods imposed in this country under the Order of February 19th last. Discussions were also being set on foot for the conclusion of a further agreement regarding the treatment of persons and companies and other miscellaneous questions. The agreement would be published as soon as it was signed.

SLIGO HOUSING QUESTION.

ULTIMATUM TO MAYOR.

MINISTER'S FIRM DEMANDS.

FORFEIT OF SUBSIDY AS ALTERNATIVE.

THE following letter, dated June 18, has been addressed to the Mayor of Sligo (Mr. J. Lynch) by Mr. E. P. McCarron, Secretary to the Department of Local Government and Public Health:—

"A CHARA,—I am directed by the Minister for Local Government and Public Health to state that he has received the report of Mr. Wren, B.E., Inspector, together with the transcript of the evidence given at the inquiry held by him as to (1) the letting by the Sligo Corporation of 68 working-class houses at Abbeyquarter, and 66 houses at Barrack street, and (2) the failure of the Corporation to take adequate steps for the demolition of unfit houses in the borough.

"From the evidence given at the inquiry, it is evident that the houses at Abbeyquarter and Barrack street referred to were intended for rehousing persons to be removed from clearance areas or unfit houses. The Inspector reports that there are 322 houses in the borough already condemned as unfit for human habitation, and the housing survey is not yet completed.

"Notwithstanding the large number of condemned houses in the borough, it is observed that tenants from 92 condemned houses only were accommodated in the new houses, and demolition was carried out in the case of 40 houses only from which tenants were removed, and in these cases demolition was necessary by reason of the fact that the cleared areas were required for rebuilding. The Corporation are aware that it is a condition precedent to the payment of subsidy under Section 6 (1) of the Housing (Financial and Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1932, that the condemned houses be demolished when vacated, and, notwithstanding repeated warnings by the Department and their Inspector, no steps were taken to demolish all condemned houses from which tenants were removed.

METHOD OF SELECTION.

"The method adopted by the Corporation in selecting tenants for the 134 houses was most unsatisfactory. In the case of 42 houses the tenants selected were not occupying condemned dwellings, and in some cases their existing housing accommodation was quite satisfactory. The action of the Corporation in selecting tenants from such houses, moreover, where such tenants were members of the Corporation, or relatives of members, was most reprehensible, and showed an utter disregard on the part of the councillors responsible, for the interests of, and the conditions under which, so many families of the working classes are existing in the borough.

"The following members of the Corporation, though not living in condemned houses, were given new houses:—Councillors Hunt, Fawley, Gilmartin, Conlon and McMorrow. The Housing (Financial and Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1932, is primarily intended for the eradication of the slums, and the abolition of slum conditions in urban and rural areas, and a special duty is cast upon the Minister to ensure that the very generous subsidies provided by the State are applied for this purpose. The removal of families from unhealthy conditions, without demolition of the unfit houses, results only in the perpetuation of the slum evil, and the Minister has repeatedly informed local authorities that in order to qualify for subsidies under the Act demolition of the unfit houses must take place. The Minister accordingly directs me to request you to call a special meeting of the Corporation immediately and to

"(1) Terminate the tenancies in the case of the 42 houses occupied by tenants whose previous housing accommodation was not condemned as unfit for human habitation, and to let these houses to persons whose existing housing accommodation has been so condemned; and

"(2) To make, within a period of six weeks from the date of this letter, the necessary orders for the clearance of unhealthy areas and the demolition of unfit houses in the borough.

THE PENALTY OF FAILURE.

"Failure to carry out these directions on the part of the Corporation will, apart from whatever action may be taken by the Minister under Section 18 of the Act, result in the forfeiture of the entire subsidy in connection with the 134 houses referred to. Such forfeiture would entail, approximately, a charge of 1s. 5d. in £1 on the rates.

"The Minister has had brought specially to his notice—(1) the evidence given by Mr. McGrory, Sanitary Officer; Dr. Quinn, Medical Officer of Health, and others, regarding the attempt made by the Mayor and Councillor Hunt to induce the Medical Officer to condemn as unfit certain houses which were not unfit, and which formed part of the subject matter of the inquiry; (2) the action of Councillor Hunt in producing a list of houses purported to be condemned by the Medical Officer and bearing his signature, which signature was repudiated by Dr. Quinn; and (3) the effort made by Councillor Hunt to have the list referred to inserted in the records of the houses previously condemned by the Medical Officer of Health, portion of which records was to be then destroyed. The Minister takes a very serious view of conduct of this nature on the part of Councillors, which shows a complete lack of appreciation of their responsibilities as corporators and a betrayal of the trust reposed in them by ratepayers.

"I am to add that the date of the special meeting to be called to deal with this communication should be furnished to this Department by return of post."

FERMANAGH-TYRONE BY-ELECTION.

INDEPENDENT NOMINATED.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

OMAGH, Tuesday.

Mr. Dominick McCrossan, millowner and farmer, of Tattykeel Rodgers, Omagh, was to-day nominated as an Independent and Farmers' candidate for the Fermanagh and Tyrone by-election, in opposition to Mr. Joseph F. Stewart, M.P., the nominee of the National Convention.

Mr. Michael McGurk, Killeenan, Cookstown, another Farmers' candidate, was also nominated, but soon afterwards withdrew and stated his withdrawal was in favour of Mr. McCrossan.

In the paper on which he relied, Mr. Stewart was proposed by the Right Rev. Dean Quinn, P.P., V.G., Dungannon, and seconded by Mr. Michael McRory, Dungannon. All the assentors were from the same district.

The poll takes place on Wednesday, 27th inst. The electorate consists of 84,909 voters for Co. Tyrone, and 33,975 for Co. Fermanagh—total 118,884, the largest constituency in the British Isles.

ALL-NIGHT RIOTING.

SOCIALISTS AND FASCISTS.

MANY INJURED IN TOULOUSE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

TOULOUSE, Tuesday.

THREE persons are reported to have been killed in the violent political riots, which continued here sporadically all last night until early this morning. The report is officially denied by the Minister of the Interior.

More than 88 persons are known to have been injured, including 38 mobile guards and over 50 demonstrators. Probably many more got home without their injuries becoming officially known. Two of the mobile guards received serious injuries.

According to the Paris Soir, 170 persons were injured, of whom 122 were taken to hospital, including four mobile guards, who are in a serious condition. The newspaper states that 300 arrests have been made.

The rioting, which began during a Socialist counter-demonstration to a Fascist meeting, are symptomatic of the continued political unrest between the Right and Left. Accusations of both the Right and Left that the other has broken the political truce called for by M. Doumergue has led to increasing party bitterness throughout the country.

FROM "THE TIMES."

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

THE SEVENTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

In a leading article to-day The Times observes:—The end of the session in Washington, planned for Saturday, but delayed until yesterday by a filibuster in the Senate, concludes the active life of the present Congress, which, elected in November, 1932, met for the first time in a special session called by President Roosevelt in March, 1933, and, adjourning last June, began its regular session in January. Unless some unforeseen emergency prompts the President to call another special session, there will be no further meeting till the new Congress, to be elected in November, assembles next January. During the late autumn and early winter there was an organised drive against the new deal, which had very influential backing, and which seemed likely to shake the President's hold over public opinion. Agitation against the new deal, which had seemed so dangerous, had had no effect at all in weakening the national confidence in the President. Republicans, as well as Democrats, reported that his prestige had been enhanced rather than diminished during the interval between the two sessions.

All things considered, proceeds The Times, Mr. Roosevelt may be well satisfied with the Seventy-third Congress, and with the co-operation he has received from it. None the less, he will feel relieved that it has at last succeeded in bringing the session to a close, and is now leaving him free for another six months to devote himself to tidying up the loose ends which have become manifest in many of his reconstructive efforts, and in co-ordinating into a more coherent whole the various sections of the new deal.

UNITED STATES WOOL INDUSTRY.

CLOSING DOWN PROPOSAL REJECTED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Tuesday.

The wool industry, by poll of its Production Control Committee, has rejected the proposal to shut down all productive machinery for a period of two weeks during next month, to be followed by a mandatory 40-hour shift at the mills. The majority of the mills, however, expressed the hope that an acceptable plan of production control will be evolved.

BONDS REDEEMABLE BY DRAWINGS.

LORD LONDONDERRY'S STATEMENT.

The Central News Lobby Correspondent says:—An interesting statement made by the Marquess of Londonderry last night was that the question of bonds redeemable by annual drawings was being considered by the Home Secretary. The House of Commons naturally will expect to hear the Government verdict from him. It has already been whispered that the Chancellor of the Exchequer is opposed to such a scheme, but, as in the case of many other questions, this may be capable of revision by the Government.

BRITAIN'S DEBT TO AMERICA.

QUESTION OF PAYMENT IN KIND.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. A. C. Curry (Liberal National) asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, in view of the fact that there is a large number of unemployed people in the United States, and that there is now a prospect of the United States Government being willing to accept the value of this country's indebtedness to them by payments in kind, he would explore the possibility of paying the American debt by the trans-shipment of boots, clothing and other goods manufactured in this country, which could be purchased by His Majesty's Treasury for the purpose, and used in the United States for the relief of destitution there?

Mr. Chamberlain—As Mr. Curry is aware, this matter was referred to in the Note recently addressed to His Majesty's Government by the United States Government. A reply to that Note is at present under consideration, and I should prefer not to make any statement on the matter at present.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

JAPANESE EXPORTS UP.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

TOKYO, Tuesday.

The Japanese Cotton Spinners' Association reports that exports of cotton piecegoods from Japan during last month amounted to 265,623,000 square yards, valued at 48,498,000 yen, which represents an increase of over 73,000,000 square yards and 13,000,000 yen compared with April

CARDINAL'S PLEA FOR IRISH PEACE,

CHARGE TO YOUNG PRIESTS.

A NATION IN NEED OF CHRISTIAN CHARITY.

"THE PEOPLE LOOK UP TO YOU: HELP THEM."

FROM OUR REPORTER.

MAYNOOTH, Tuesday.

POLITICAL animosity, and the troubles and crimes arising from it, were denounced by Cardinal MacRory, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of All-Ireland, when, accompanied by the Archbishops of Dublin, Tuam and Cashel, and the Bishops of every diocese in Ireland, he addressed priests and students of the Maynooth Union in the McMahon Hall of St. Patrick's College here to-day.

The meeting celebrated the 138th anniversary of the foundation of the College as the national seminary of Ireland, and three hundred and fifty priests from all over the country and from Great Britain assembled with the bishops to take part in the functions.

Cardinal MacRory, who is attending the annual meeting of bishops at Maynooth College, congratulated the Rev. Monsignor McCaffrey, President of the College, on the report which had been made on the progress of the students. In addressing the many young priests about to start on their holidays, he said: "You are going out among a people who, in spite of their shortcomings, are among the finest in the world; a people naturally kind, generous and warm-hearted; strong in faith and devout in the practice of their religion.

WITH EYES UPLIFTED.

"Indeed, if political animosity and the defects and crimes that spring from it could only be got rid of, our people would be, perhaps, the most crimeless on the earth. These people look up to you. They expect much from you. Do not disappoint them. Let your life among them during your holidays be edifying and in every way worthy of your calling. In particular, I would say to you—set an example to the members of your own family and to all with whom you come in contact, for charity and forbearance, and for the consideration of the views of others. In these things we Irishmen have a good deal to learn, especially when there is question of politics. We have to learn, for instance, in all things that are not clearly unlawful, to concede to others, without bitterness or hatred and without violence—actual or threatened—the liberty of view that we claim for ourselves. We all love Ireland according to our lights. Why, then, do we not recognise this, and try to agree to differ?

"It is because I feel that five hundred young men like you, scattered over the country, can do a good deal to help to throw oil on the waters that I mention the matter here. Do what you can, and may your efforts meet with success."

HOPE AND CONFIDENCE.

Commenting on the progress made during the academic year, the Cardinal said that he and the bishops felt that, so long as the President of the College could speak of the work in such good terms and in such an unqualified manner, the Catholic Church in Ireland could face the future with hope and confidence. He also expressed his regret at the resignation of Dr. Boylan, Vice-President of the College, who was recently appointed to take charge of the parish of Dun Laoghaire.

The President of St. Patrick's College (Monsignor McCaffrey) spoke of the work of the seminary, and welcomed the old students.

"Even in America," he said, "there is a Maynooth Union of Irish priests, and I think this shows that old students never forget their College. Most of them left Maynooth about twenty-five years ago."

Expressing regret at the loss of the service of Dr. Boylan, the President hoped that, despite the work entailed in his new pastoral charge, the College's late Professor of Scripture would find time to continue his scholarly writings on the subject.

THE MISSION FIELD.

In the course of a paper on mission work, read in Irish, the Rev. Denis P. Flynn, B.D., All Hallows' College, Dublin, said that more than a century ago new mission work was begun by Irish priests when virtually every other country was at a stand-still. The work had progressed rapidly; thousands of priests had been sent from Ireland to the farthest corners of the English-speaking world; the College with which he was associated had sent out more than eight hundred.

Ireland's missionary work could now be considered virtually ended, as the United States of America, England and Australia now had their own colleges and were almost independent. In Ireland there was a better understanding of pagan missions than there had been twenty years ago, but Father Flynn feared that the understanding was not growing rapidly enough.

The Venerable Archdeacon Byrne, P.P., V.G., Waterford, presided at the meeting at which Father Flynn's paper was read, and a vote of thanks was passed on the motion of the Rev. J. O'Connell (Maynooth) and the Rev. C. Lee (Cashel).

WORLD PROBLEMS.

Men all over the world appeared to be living under a shadow of an impending social catastrophe, declared Canon Kelleher, S.T.L., President of St. John's College, Waterford, in his address to the Union on the need for Catholic social organisation. Since the termination of the Great War it had been breaking on the minds of men that society was about to enter on a new phase, radically different from what they had previously been acquainted with. From the time of the Renaissance the passions and vices of fallen human nature had been at work in opposition to the Christian influences; selfishness and self-sufficiency had brought about individualism and so moral restraint began to wane. Economics became gradually emancipated from the control of justice and equity, while, with free competition, a foreign element was introduced into society which, unless ejected, would ultmately destroy it.

COMMUNISM.

It was not by accident that the Communist movement followed quickly on the non-moral economics; for in materialistic principles, there could be no possible justification for the retention of a Christian form of society. Since about 1847 the Communist movement had been forging ahead, and, therefore, forces had been at work for the radical overthrow of society as it had been previously organised. Non-moral principles weakened from within, and the Communist movement led the attack from outside.

THE MAYNOOTH UNION.

Speaking of the Russian revolution of 1917, Canon Kelleher said that Russia was only the first engagement of the great campaign contemplated by the Communists, their full objective being to reconstruct the world on consistent materialistic principles. And, from their own religious, or rather atheistic, standpoint, who could say that their ambition was altogether fantastic.

IMMINENCE OF WAR.

People might say that they did not want Communism, but at the same time they were unconsciously, and, perhaps, against their will, preparing for it by the vicious principle they adopted, and which appeared to paralyse industrialism and corrupt economic relations, as well as by setting nation against nation and class against class.

"There is no real accepted principle of stability in the world at present," continued the lecturer. "An international conflict may be precipitated at any moment, and should that happen, Communists would find in more countries than one conditions no less favourable than they found in Russia in 1917. Within many countries, too, there are all the elements that make for class conflict, and should such a conflict occur anywhere on a large scale the Communists would use it to advance their cause no less effectively than in an international war.

SOCIETY'S TASK.

"It will not appear unduly alarming, therefore, to suggest that society is set towards a crisis which Communists are determined to use for a materialistic régime as prefigured in Bolshevik Russia. It is no longer a question of preserving existing conditions against the onslaughts of Communism. Society must be reconstructed on the lines set out in the Communist programme and initiated in Russia, or on definitely Christian principles."

The people in Ireland could not fail to see the dangers which threatened society. If they themselves were not responsible for a non-moral economic system, it had certainly been imposed upon them. That system, with all its corroding influences, was preparing the way for Communism in Ireland. In this country, too, they were not without evidences of loyal Catholics being seduced from allegiance to their Church. This evil might not be very pronounced at present, but it would undoubtedly grow if not quickly checked.

WHERE IRELAND LAGS.

Here, as elsewhere, non-moral capitalism and atheistic Communism were fighting it out between them. And where, in all reason, they might be expected to lead the way, the people of Ireland lagged far behind Catholics in other countries which were less favourably situated.

There was no national organisation for giving effect to Christian principles, and one might think that when the workers were unable or unwilling to conform to the dictates of justice and equity it became the duty of the civil rulers to intervene for the correction of abused and evil conditions.

In reality civil rulers—successful politicians—were more helpless than the workers themselves. It was the national misfortune that political energy, instead of being directed towards securing the welfare of the country, was mainly spent in conflicts between parties. Under the existing form of democracy, expressing itself in party government, this, unfortunately, appeared to be inevitable; and, from a party point of view, there was more to be expected from appeals to sentiment and prejudice than to reason and charity.

CHURCH AND POLITICS.

Canon Kelleher, speaking of priests in politics, said that theoretically there could be no reasonable objection to priests taking part in politics, but in practice there were obvious disadvantages. No matter who entered or abstained from politics as they were pursued at present—on bitterly antagonistic party lines—there was little ground for hoping that through them the Catholic solution for social maladies could be made operative. If one party did attempt to put into practice particular Catholic principles, rival parties would, as a matter of course, feel bound to misrepresent and attack them.

To him it did not appear unjust to say that party politics did not conduce the wholehearted co-operation between men that tended to promote charity. He suggested that a Catholic Social League should be established for all Ireland for the purpose of preparing the way for the realisation of the Christian social solution to the world's difficulties.

WORK FOR LAYMEN.

The Rev. C. Lucey, D.D., M.A., Professor of Ethics, Maynooth, proposing a vote of thanks to Canon Kelleher, said that speakers concentrated on invectives against Communism, but did not set out the means by which it should be combated. People thought that the Church had got a cut and dried programme. That was expecting too much: the Church had no social programme, only the principles. It was up to the laymen to put these principles into a programme.

The vote was seconded by the Rev. Brodie Brosnan, P.P., Briersfield, Lancs. The Rev. Fr. Aloysius, O.M.Cap., supporting the motion, said that Catholic Action must be both defensive and aggressive; but not unnecessarily offensive. They must act in a Christian manner towards their opponents and be just, not allowing the shibboleth of Catholic Action to cover the action of Catholics for their material advancement.

He thought it a pity that the great evil of class war was accentuated at the present time by the fact that sodalities, outside the country districts, were largely becoming organisations merely of the workers. It was not "class" now to belong to sodalities.

BISHOPS' MEETING.

Archdeacon Byrne expressed the opinion that the people of Ireland should pay more attention to the Pope's call for Catholic Action, and he looked forward to the day when the organisation would be founded in the country to enable the laity to take their full part in Christianising family and social life.

A private meeting of the bishops, at which the bishops of all diocese, with the exception of the Most Rev. Dr. Brown, Bishop of Cloyne, were present, was held during the day. The meeting, presided over by Cardinal MacRory, lasted several hours, but no statement was issued.

At the business meeting of the Maynooth Union, the secretary, the Very Rev. Dr. Michael Browne, reported that forty bishops and 1,200 priests were now members of the Union. The treasurer, the Most Rev. Dr. Kissane, stated that at the last meeting there was a balance of £899 in hands, and since then income amounted to £311 and expenditure was £274. The reports were adopted.

The Rev. Dr. Moran (librarian), the Rev. Dr. Walsh and the Rev. Dr. O'Neill were appointed to a committee for the publication of a catalogue of Irish manuscripts in the College. On the motion of the Rev. Father Aloysius, O.M.Cap., Dublin, £150 was voted for the work if the Historical Commission did not undertake to pay the expenses.

The Rev. Father F. Mallon, P.P., V.F., seconding the vote, said that the work of collating the manuscripts of the College concerned all Ireland, as they had material there for the building of a social history of the country.

At the suggestion of Archdeacon Byrne, P.P., V.F., Waterford, a fund, known as the Maynooth Union Publication Fund, was established, the income to be devoted to the publishing of scientific works on theology, Canon law, scripture, philosophy and other studies approved by the Society. The fund will be administered by a committee consisting of the President of the Union, the President of the College, two members nominated by the trustees of the College and one by the Union. An initial donation of £500 was voted.

Archdeacon Byrne remarked that the scheme had the approval of the bishops, and one member of the Union had promised to place £1,000 at the disposal of the fund.

ANNUAL DINNER.

Cardinal MacRory was the guest of honour at a dinner given in the refectory by the Maynooth Union, and at which Dr. McCaffrey, President of the College, presided.

Proposing the toast of "The Pope," Dr. McCaffrey congratulated the organisers of the Union and expressed his pleasure at seeing so many old students of the College reunited. He also welcomed Monsignor M. J. Curran, Rector of the Irish College in Rome.

Catholics were proud to have Pius XI. ruling as Pope, because he had gone a long way towards restoring the former position of the Popes by the attitude he adopted on European questions. Only the other day the Archbishop of Canterbury said that the world looked to the Pope for a solution of the difficulties which faced it, and that the world would listen to him. The Chairman then proposed the health of Cardinal MacRory and complimented him on his appointment as Papal Legate to the Eucharistic Congress in Melbourne.

The Cardinal replied and thanked the President and members of the Union for the manner in which they had received the toast.

To-night the following degrees were conferred on students of the College before Benediction was given in the Chapel.

MIND AND BODY TRAINING.

SOKOL SYSTEM FOR TROOPS.

LECTURE AT ARMY SHOOTING MEETING

Good shooting characterised the individual rifle and revolver competitions of the Free State Army at the Curragh yesterday. Private McEvoy again proved himself the Army's crack rifleman with a score of 119 points out of a possible 140. Corporal O'Connor, with 106, was second.

In the revolver competition Webberley and Temple finished close with 54 and 53 marks respectively out of a possible 60 in the first, second and fourth practises.

Introducing Lieutenant Tichy, who has been invited by the Free State Department of defence to teach Sokol methods to a selected group of officers in the Army School of Physical Culture, Major P. Ruzicka, Czechoslovak Consul, traced the history of the movement, and descriped the important part played by Sokols in the liberation of his country.

The movement, he said, was organised as far back as 1862, when the language and individuality of the Czech nation showed every sign of being swamped by the onslaught of the dominating culture and language of the Austrian Empire. Founded on natural laws and aiming at the steady development of the body and mind, the movement had proved its universal value in many countries.

The physical drill of the Sokols, said the speaker, aimed at all-round development and harmony of movement. Physical fitness developed courage and self-discipline.

FESTIVALS.

Referring to the great Sokol festivals which are held every five or six years, Major Ruzicka said that the stadium where the mass displays took place had accommodation for more than 15,000 picked gymnasts at one time. Every little village, he added, sends its best team of gymnasts to the festival, and only one rehearsal sufficed before the actual performance. He believed, he said, that with a little effort and organisation similar results could be obtained in Ireland—the exercises could easily be done to Irish folk music, so full of harmony and rhythm.

Among the large audience who listened to Major Ruzicka were Mr. F. Aiken, T.D., Minister for Defence; Mr. T. Derrig, T.D., Minister for Education; Major-General Brennan, Chief of Staff; Major-General Sweeney, G.O.C., Curragh District; Colonel Dunne, Colonel McCorley, and Colonel McGauren.

Mr. F. Aiken, T.D., expressing thanks to those present, said there was almost a perfect analogy between the Sokol movement in Czechoslovakia and the Gaelic athletic movement here. He understood that the Czechoslovakian nation had no training in arms, but, aided by the Sokol movement, they aroused the nation's sentiment and achieved a republic.

The results of the shooting competitions were:—

Individual Rifle—Regular Units (possible score, 140): Pte. McEvoy (3rd Batt.), 119; Cpl. O'Connor (3rd Batt.), 106; Pte. Geraghty (5th Batt.), 104; Co. Sergt. Hill (Artillery), 103; Lieut. Mew (Engineers), 98; Co. Sergt. Cook (3rd Batt.), 97; Sergt. Foley (H.Q., Curragh), 95; A/Cpl. Gardiner (Ordnance), 91; Lieut. McNamara (R.T.D.), 89; Pte. Daly (Signals), 79.

Individual Revolver (possible score, 60)—Cpl. Webberley (Military Police), 54; Sergt. Temple (5th Batt.), 53; A/Cpl. White, A/Cpl. Finn, and A/Cpl. McGrath, all of the Military Police, tied with 47 each for third place; Pte. Dowling (2nd Batt.) and Sergt Cleary (2nd Batt.) tied with 46 for fourth; Cadet O'Neill (I.M.C.), 45; Pte. Schweppe (5th Batt.), 45; Capt. Finn (D.O.D.), 44.

HORSE-BREEDING IN FREE STATE.

THE INDUSTRY THREATENED.

ANIMALS LEAVING THE COUNTRY.

MR. COSGRAVE'S MOTION IN THE DAIL.

DURING the Committee stage of the Finance Bill in the Dail yesterday,

Mr. COSGRAVE (U.I., Cork City) moved the insertion of a new section, that "in order to remove doubts it is hereby declared and enacted, that income derived from fees charged for the service of stallions kept at a farm for stud purposes shall be treated as income coming within the terms of Schedule B, and not of any other schedule of the Income Tax Act, 1918."

He said that the amendment was moved with the view of helping, if possible, in present circumstances, the horse-breeding industry in this country. During the past few years by reason of British tariffs, which fell heavily on horses, horse-breeders here found that mares could not be sent over to stallions in this country, and, consequently, the income from their thoroughbred stallions here was greatly reduced. To his own knowledge half a dozen horses had already left the country, but this could not be taken as a maximum, and it might be that others would also have to go. It was a great pity and a great loss to the country, and he did not know any owner who wanted to send away his horses.

It might be that the soil and climate here were particularly suitable for breeding. One of the horses that had gone had sired three Derby winners in the last five years. The owner had sixteen nominations for the horse here, but of these six had been withdrawn, and of the remaining ten it did not appear that he would get more than six at 400 guineas each. Since the horse had gone away his nominations had been filled with forty mares at 400 guineas. No matter how successful an owner was, he could not afford to lose such a number of nominations. He urged that the adoption of his amendment or a similar one might induce horse owners to allow their animals to remain here.

This industry required the expenditure of considerable sums of money, and it was necessary to employ a considerable amount of capital. Many people who were engaged in the industry had done that, not so much in this country as in England, but they had not got the results.

Mr. BENNETT (U.I., Limerick) said that the departure of some famous stallions from this country was a bad blow to the Irish bloodstock industry. Comparatively few high-class sires were left, and it was doubtful if some of the present owners would continue to keep their animals here.

MINISTER'S ADMISSION.

Mr. MacENTEE admitted that Irish bloodstock was suffering under existing conditions, but he was not sure that the amendment would be of much use. The Government was administering the law as it had always been administered by the Irish Courts. Was it right that a man with an income running into five figures should be assessed as if he had only £1,000?

Mr. COSGRAVE said that persons had indulged in horse-breeding not for moneymaking. The National Stud in Kildare was an example of that. Not five owners' income would run into five figures for stallion fees in this country, and these people might have expended considerable sums to get that figure.

This industry gave employment to a large number of people, and stimulated others to invest money in horse-breeding. These horse-breeders were interested in getting the best out of nature for their country.

ROMPING MINISTERS.

Mr. DILLON (U.I., Donegal) said that it was their duty to see that the revenue laws were administered so as to apply equally to every citizen. There was no agricultural industry that could be carried on with profit at present. There was one branch, however, which might survive the storm of the economic war, which the Minister himself had hoped would soon end, and that branch was horse-breeding.

It was desirable that it should get some encouragement to "live horse until you got the grass." While President de Valera, Senator Connolly and the Minister for Defence were romping around the country thanking God that the British market was gone, the Minister for Finance had declared that he was prepared to borrow three-fourths of the bounties, as he did not believe that the economic war would last much longer. The Minister had admitted that, from the revenue point of view, the amount involved was negligible, and it was not in the interests of the country that one of its best-known and most profitable breeding industries should be hampered for such a small amount.

METHOD OF TAXATION.

Mr. MacENTEE, the Minister, said that the man who kept stallions for stud purposes and acquired substantial profits should pay tax on the profits which he definitely got from these stallions. Such a person was not charged on the gross fees, but on the aggregate profits. Therefore, he was not on any less an unfavourable basis than the taxpayer who ran any other business.

Mr. COSGRAVE asked if any allowance was made for depreciation.

Mr. MacENTEE said that every allowance due was made.

Mr. COSGRAVE said that the main point they had in view was preserving the thoroughbred stock for the world, and for the country especially. The fact that half a dozen sires had gone was bad, but they had remarkably good ones left. The fact that five or six good blood-stallions were sent out of the country should have been enough to have put the Minister on to his job immediately.

This was not a political question. It should not be treated as such. The persons involved were not concerned with politics, but with the breeding of high-class bloodstock. He supposed that the man who had most money invested in bloodstock in this country had not a single stallion at the moment, but he had lost a pretty penny through the economic war, as he had paid on one yearling last year £2,500 in tariff duties. That sort of person ought to be the concern of the Minister, because there was a limit to his purse, and, if the limit was reached the damage might be done to the breeding industry rather than to the individual.

Mr. DILLON (U.I., Donegal) said that the viewpoint of the Minister was that there was a certain type of agriculturist who was making too much money out of agriculture, and they would go after him. They should withdraw the right to option between Schedule D and Schedule B from every agriculturist, or leave the right to every agriculturist.

The amendment was lost by 40 votes to 22.

EX-SERVICE MEN'S HOUSES.

JUDGMENT IN APPEAL CASE RESERVED.

The appeal in the action brought to determine the rights of ex-Service men to live free of rent in cottages built by the Irish Sailors' and Soldiers' Land Trust was concluded before Lord Justice Andrews and Lord Justice Best in the Court of Appeal at Belfast yesterday, judgment being reserved. The plaintiffs appealed against the decision of Mr. Justice Megaw on May 9th last, when their claim was dismissed.

The pretty bungalow, "Arva," on Malahide road, at Artane, and 13 Russell avenue, Jones's road, were sold prior to auction.

GYMKHANA AT EDENDERRY.

COMING LOCAL ELECTIONS.

GENERAL O'DUFFY AND A REPUBLIC.

FROM OUR REPORTER.

EDENDERRY, Tuesday.

A NEW departure in League of Youth fixtures was made yesterday, when, by special licence of the Irish Turf Club, the Edenderry branch of the organisation held a successful gymkhana in a field, lent by Mr. W. Dames, near Edenderry. There was every element of a race meeting, with five events for horses over a two mile course, and one for ponies 14.2 hands, over a course of one and a half miles. For each event there were entries ranging from eleven to sixteen, and the number of runners was very satisfactory.

Delightful weather favoured the opening of the meeting, and there was a large attendance of Blue Shirts and others out for a day's real enjoyment. Mr. P. J. Moore, as Chairman of the Committee, and Mr. J. C. Bergin, League of Youth organiser for Offaly, who had charge of the arrangements, are to be congratulated on the success of the meeting, which was attended by General O'Duffy, Dr. O'Higgins, T.D.; Mr. Finlay, T.D., and Captain Minch, T.D. To the casual observer it seemed that every second person in the town and on the field wore a blue shirt or blue blouse, and the total number of Blue Shirts present was not less than 1,500.

General O'Duffy motored from Dublin, and was received outside the town by about 300 cyclists in blue shirts, who escorted him to the field, where a guard of honour was lined up, and he was given a cordial welcome.

GENERAL O'DUFFY'S SPEECH.

Having watched some of the races, General O'Duffy, in the course of his speech, said that he was glad to see that the Edenderry branch was introducing sport. It was the aim of their organisation to develop outdoor games, athletics, boxing, equitation, and also healthy indoor games. They wanted to do this in the fourteen hundred branches of the League, among their membership of 120,000. It was their intention to form Blue Shirt athletic organisations. This week they would hold the initial meeting to set that organisation going, and they hoped to become affiliated with the national organisations controlling every form of sport. They wanted to cater first for their own members, and, at the same time to stimulate interest in all healthy forms of sport.

The League of Youth had surprised many people, including President de Valera, and before the President was very much older it would surprise him very much more. With regard to the Local Government elections, the League of Youth intended to win them. He had claimed that the organisation had a walk-over in four counties—Leix, Tipperary, Kilkenny and Waterford. These Councils had been dissolved because Fianna Fail organisers had sent out an S.O.S. to prevent an election, but, he said, there must be elections in these counties. When they got Captain Hughes out of jail and disposed of the other court actions which were pending they would see that there would be elections in these four centres and Fianna Fail would not be able to get a single quota. They were going to win the County Council elections with an overwhelming majority, and Mr. Sean MacEntee could take that as a notice to quit.

QUESTION OF REPUBLIC.

There was a lot of talk about a Republic, but if Mr. Thomas or somebody else imposed a Republic on Mr. de Valera he would be done. There was nothing to prevent him from declaring a Republic for the twenty-six counties. He could arrange to issue passports to Northern Ireland. There was no one going to say one word against him, but Fianna Fail knew that the idea was impracticable.

Dr. Ward had stated in Co. Monaghan (General O'Duffy's native place) that John Bull was financing the Blue Shirts. That was false. Continuing, he said that if the Irish people decided that they should have a republican form of government, so far as he was concerned he would fall in behind Mr. de Valera, but he believed that a republic for the twenty-six counties would be the worst thing possible.

He was in the Blue Shirt movement because he wanted to remove the curse of partition, and he believed that that organisation could do it.

The Civic Guards, he said, did not know where they stood to-day. The Blue Shirts should leave law and order to the police force, but there might come a time when they would not do it.

Dr. O'Higgins, T.D.; Mr. Finlay and Captain Minch also spoke.

The meeting concluded in a downpour of rain.

BELFAST MERCHANT SUED.

NO JUDGMENT ON JURY'S FINDINGS.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Tuesday.

There was a strange ending to a law suit in the King's Bench, Belfast, to-day, when the Lord Chief Justice abstained from giving judgment and left the various parties to move as they might be advised.

The suit was one in which David Silverstein, Whitechapel road, London, claimed £142 8s. from John Ross, of Linenhall street, Belfast, for goods. The plaintiff's case was that, after selecting a number of ladies' garments, the defendant returned the goods, stating that they were absolutely useless and had the appearance of secondhand articles and smelled of benzine.

The defendant's case was that the articles were stained or damaged, and were useless to him.

A number of questions put to the jury were answered in favour of the different parties, and the plaintiff was awarded £142.

The Lord Chief Justice abstained from giving judgment.

ULSTER SLANDER SUIT.

FARMER'S FEES ON SEIZED CATTLE.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Tuesday.

An interesting sidelight on the extent of cattle-smuggling on the border was shown in a slander action which came before Mr. Justice Brown and a jury in the King's Bench, Belfast, to-day.

It was stated that the plaintiff, one of the farmers, who keep arrested cattle in livery for the Customs authorities, made in the last eight months fees amounting to £341 at 5s. per head per day.

The action was brought by Major William Stewart, Daisy Hill, Clogher, County Tyrone, against John R. Hunter, retired bank manager, Barnett's road, Knock, Belfast, who has a farm in the same district as the plaintiff, asking for damages for alleged slander.

Complainant stated that on January 18 last six cattle, which had been on the lands of the defendant, were seized by the Customs authorities and impounded on his lands.

The defendant came to the Clogher police barracks and interviewed Sergeant Jameson with regard to buying the cattle back, and he eventually did buy the cattle at his own offer. While there the defendant said in the presence of the sergeant and an auctioneer: "I am very anxious to get these animals back as they are being ill-treated and starved."

Defendant, giving evidence, denied using the words complained of, and, after further evidence, the case was adjourned until to-morrow.

Twin Brothers Ordained.—The Rev. A. Fitzmaurice and the Rev. B. Fitzmaurice, who were among the fifty-one priests ordained at Maynooth on Sunday, are the twin sons of Mr. J. and Mrs. Fitzmaurice, National teachers, Tawnamore, Carrick-on-Shannon, Co. Roscommon.

BATON CHARGES IN CLAREMORRIS.

ATTACK ON CANON MacHUGH CONDEMNED.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

CLAREMORRIS, Tuesday.

DISTURBUANCES were renewed in Claremorris to-night, when Mr. E. Cronin and other members of the United Ireland movement held a meeting to protest against the attack made on Canon MacHugh, parish priest, after the United Ireland meeting on Sunday last. It was race day in the town, and crowds remained in the streets, and the shopkeepers closed their premises at an earlier hour than usual. The police, under Superintendent, O'Mara, made several baton charges to disperse the rival crowds. Several persons were slightly injured, and one man had to be treated by a doctor.

The Blue Shirts had intended to hold their meeting at the Square, but the crowd become so hostile that the Square was abandoned, and the party formed up in Church street, with a cordon of police between them and their opponents. There was a baton charge and several Guards were knocked down and received blows from the retreating crowds. Stones and other missiles were thrown at the Blue Shirts.

Mr. Cronin, in the course of his speech, said that it was an extraordinary fact that forty-eight hours had passed since the aged canon was attacked and no action had been taken by the authorities to bring the culprit to justice. Now, for the first time, they saw the Fianna Fail present in their true light, to support the priest-beaters of Claremorris. They, as Irish Catholics, were bound to protect their priests. Their aged canon had been assaulted here, and it would be to their everlasting shame if all creeds and all shades of political opinion did not raise their voices against this outrage.

Before many months were past they would deal with the priest beaters.

Mr. Sean T. Ruane said that they demanded that the authorities, whose first concern should be law and order, should take the matter in hands.

An opposition meeting was addressed by Messrs. M. P. King, P. Mullaney (Secretary to the County Board, G.A.A.), G. French, and B. Heaney.

A SMUGGLED REVOLVER.

RETURNED AMERICAN FINED.

At Liverpool yesterday, Francis Healy (26), labourer, was charged with having imported an automatic revolver without permission.

Mr. Stephenson, prosecuting, said that Healy landed from the liner Laconia at Liverpool on Monday night from New York. He was a third-class passenger, and after being passed through the Customs, where he declared a few cigarettes, he was seen by another Customs officer hanging about in a suspicious manner outside the shed. He was asked if he had anything dutiable on his person as distinct from his baggage. He said that he had not, but the officer was not satisfied and took Healy to the office where he was searched. Between his shirt and pullover was found a large Colt automatic revolver and 100 rounds of ammunition. When asked why he did not declare the weapon, Healy replied: I was scared. I wanted it to shoot deer in Ireland. If I had got off at Queenstown I would have got away with it."

Healy, who pleaded guilty, told the stipendiary that he had worked as a labourer in America and was a native of the Irish Free State.

A fine of 56s. was imposed.

GREENORE-HOLYHEAD SERVICE.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NEWRY, Tuesday.

At a meeting of Newry Chamber of Commerce yesterday, Mr. D. Ferris, J.P., presiding, a letter was received from Mr. J. M. Irwin, Irish traffic manager of the L.M.S., stating that they were not prepared to reinstate the Greenore-Holyhead service, as there was ample service through other routes, unless entirely new traffic was to pass between Ireland and England, and not merely a transference of passengers.

HOLD-UP OF BANKER.

FERMANAGH MEN CHARGED.

THREE RETURNED FOR TRIAL.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

MONAGHAN, Tuesday.

AFTER an investigation lasting three days, before District Justice Lavery, at Monaghan District Court, three of the men accused in connection with the recent armed hold-up of Mr. J. H. Clegg, Manager, Ulster Bank, Monaghan, were returned for trial, and one, Terence Clerkin, Shannock Green, Roslea, County Fermanagh, was discharged, the Justice stating that there was insufficient evidence in his case to go to the jury.

The men sent for trial are: — James R. Elliott, farmer and motor owner, Drumcoo, Magheraveely, Newtownbutler; Isaac Boyd, 'bus proprietor, The Diamond, Clones; and Patrick McManus, 'bus driver, Dromard, Clones.

Fifty witnesses were examined during the hearing.

The prisoner, Boyd, in a statement put in evidence by Superintendent O'Boyle, said:—"On last Friday night, before the hold-up, James Elliott, Paddy McManus, Clerkin and myself met out at Lackey and discussed the whole thing, and next morning at about 9.30 a.m. Elliott came with the car and lifted McManus and myself at Parkhill Gate, and we lifted Clerkin on near his own place.

THEIR HANDS UP.

"We went on right through Smithboro' and Monaghan and out the Ballybay road to the place where the hold-up was. Elliott took the car up the road—a different one to where we got off. I stayed on one part of the road and Clerkin and McManus went further up. They halted the car and I came running up to the car where they had it stopped. I saw some men standing against the ditch with their hands up. McManus turned the car and took it down the road. Clerkin was in the back with me. Further down the road we abandoned the car, and Elliott lifted us on his car. We went by the Cootehill road and through by-roads until we arrived at Lackey. Clerkin got off at his own house, and McManus and I got off beyond Parkhill Gate and Elliott went on with the car. McManus and I went into his house as if we were coming from fishing. There were two revolvers and one rifle at the hold-up. I had a revolver; Clerkin had another, and McManus had the rifle. Elliott and myself opened the money-box and saw £2 15s. in it. When leaving the car I took out the cash-box and money, and McManus hid it in a bog and marsh and gave me 13s. 6d. out of it. I don't know what happened the rest."

The majority of the witnesses were people who saw a car with a bicycle tied on the back at different stages from the scene of the hold-up to Lackey Bridge, beyond the border, where the bicycle, which had fallen from the car, was found.

HIGH COURT WRIT UPON MAGISTRATES.

An interesting legal point will be fought out in the King's Bench Division, Belfast, as the result of the granting yesterday of an application made on behalf of Francis Rusk, Carrickcloughan, and Michael Henry, Camlough, County Armagh, for a writ of certiorari against the Justices at Newry Petty Sessions to remove to the King's Bench certain orders made by the Justices, for the purpose of having them quashed.

Counsel for the applicants stated that at Newry Sessions on June 13, Rusk and Henry were prepared to plead guilty to attempted evasion of duty on cattle. The Crown, however, entered a new, or additional, charge, and the summons was served in Court, despite a strong protest by the defending solicitors. The magistrates convicted, and the men were fined £300 each, or six months' imprisonment, the original charge against them having been withdrawn.

The legality of the action will be argued when the case comes on for hearing.

NAVAL 'PLANE IN CORK HARBOUR.

The flying boat, Perth, arrived in Cork Harbour yesterday afternoon, following a flight of three hours from Plymouth, to which division she is attached. She was met on arrival by an officer of the British destroyer, Viny, and by Captain R. M. Murray, Deputy Harbour Master, Queenstown, and assisted to moor. The Perth is manned by two officers and a crew of five, and is the latest addition to the flying service. She is fitted with sleeping and cooking accommodation, and the crew remained aboard last night. Flight-Lieutenant Banbridge, R.A.F., who is in charge, said that they left Plymouth at twelve-thirty and made an average speed of 78 knots. It is understood that the object of the plane's flight is to return this morning with Lieutenant-General Sir William St. G. Kirk, who has been making a tour of inspection of the British garrisons occupying Irish ports.

Alleged Possession of Gelignite.—Joseph Hawes, Moore street, Kilrush, was returned for trial on a charge of having in his possession 13 sticks of gelignite.

SKIN ITCH AND ERUPTIONS.

Any reader who suffers the distressing itching of Eczema, Psoriasis or Pruritus is strongly advised to use Dr. D. Dennis' liquid healing antiseptic—D.D.D. Prescription. Relief is immediate. Eczematous diseases are always most active when the victim gets to bed, but even if the skin seems literally on fire a little D.D.D. Prescription applied with cotton-wool will stop the itching in two or three seconds and allow the sufferer to enjoy a good night's rest.

Get a 1/9 bottle of D.D.D. Prescription from your chemist and start your cure to-day.

MURDER CONFESSION IN COURT.

Manchester police are investigating the murder confession by Walter Prince at Notts. Assizes on Monday.

Prince, a thirty-two-years-old labourer, was found guilty of the murder of Harriet Shaw (21), of Retford, by strangling her, and sentenced to death.

In the witness-box he declared that he was guilty of a murder in Manchester in 1929, for which a man named George Fratson is at present serving a sentence of penal servitude.

Ivan John Sellors (35), a painter, of Rose Gardens, Holloways, near Matlock, Derbyshire, was found dead late on Monday night by motorists on the Herne Bay-Canterbury road, near Sturry. There were no signs of injury. He was still astride his motor cycle, and it is thought that on becoming ill he shut off his engine and the machine ran against the bank and remained upright.

THE ROYAL HUNT CUP

PRICKET GETS THE VOTE FOR THE BIG RACE AT ASCOT.

THE number of runners for the Royal Hunt Cup to-day will be above the average. Decided over one of the severest seven furlongs courses in England, it takes a good horse to win this race, but the candidates include many who have shown excellent form over the distance and in the right class, so that backers will need luck on their side to hit upon the winner.

The best-backed candidate so far has been Mr. J. B. Joel's Alluvial, and, as his form at the back end of last season and this year will bear the closest inspection, he will probably remain favourite provided he draws one of the favoured positions on the stand side. Alluvial is not overburdened for a six-year-old, and he showed that he does not mind hard going when winning the Victoria Cup at Hurst Park recently. It is not often that a horse of Alluvial's age shows improvement, but I really believe he is an exception to the rule. Anyway the fact remains that he has done all that has been asked of him on the home training grounds, and his connections should know what is required, for they won the race a few years ago with Priory Park.

GOOD WORD FOR FONAB.

I have little doubt that Light Sussex will find his burden beyond him, and as Solfatara has done nothing of note for a long time I must also pass her over. It is against Cotonaster that she is a filly, and, in any case, she has gone high in the scale since winning the "Jubilee" at Kempton Park.

I must put in a good word for Fonab, however, because I hear that he has not yet reproduced his best form this season. He was favourite for the event last year and has only 5lb. more to shoulder on this occasion.

There is no doubt that Pricket is a brilliant performer over this distance, and although he has failed in most of his big race ventures he is reported to be fit, and well fancied by the right people. I certainly give him a great chance at the weights, and he appeals to me more than such as Commander III., The Abbot and Young Native.

Another nicely treated in the matter of weight is Canteener, and the only reason I oppose him is that he does not relish hard going. I feel sure that the French challenger, Rentenmark, is going to play a prominent part. A son of Epinard, he should possess the necessary turn of initial speed to keep him out of trouble in the early stages, and as he easily beat Rodosto on weight-for-age terms over nine furlongs last month he seems to have ample stamina. He will have to be every bit as good as his admirers believe to defy 7st. 13lb., but there is the right encouragement from across the Channel.

Of the remainder I should not be in the least surprised to see Highlander, Earlston and Shrewton fighting out the issue, but I consider that represents the safest proposition.

In the opening event, the Churchill Stakes, I prefer to the unlucky Felicitation, and in the Chesham Stakes appears to represent the best bet of the afternoon. Gynerium has improved with each race.

ANGELICO

GYNERIUM

After the defeat of Colombo at the first stage one must be prepared for anything, but I cannot see anything likely to upset the Derby winner, in the King Edward VII. Stakes. He has not been over-raced, and it is said that he has done particularly well at home since Epsom.

WINDSOR LAD,

The going will not be too hard for and I think he will take care of Effaceable and Celestial City in the Bessborough Stakes.

The unbeaten Knighted will be well tested in the Fern Hill Stakes, which I think will be won by

SATYR,

who is a great weight-carrier, and remarkably speedy for the distance of the race. Zelina is fancied to take her revenge on in the Coronation Stakes, but the latter is in such good form at the moment that I fear to oppose her.

LIGHT BROCADE

THE RACE.

Lament, Meldrum and Hands Off were the first to show in front, but when the field had properly settled down after about half a mile Lament had been covered Meldrum went on from Constant Vixen and Lament, the remainder being headed by Sethos. Going into Swinley Bottom the order was Meldrum, Constant Vixen, Hands Off, Lament, No Earthly, Within the Law and Sethos, with Ciaran and Solatium the back-markers. Approaching the straight, Meldrum held command from Hands Off and Penny-a-Liner, with Ciaran, now beginning to improve, in front of Constant Vixen, Sethos and Lament. Hands Off was asked for his effort about a quarter of a mile from the post, and, making a quick response, held off Penny-a-Liner and Meldrum, to win by one length; four lengths separated second and third. Ciaran was fourth, Sethos fifth, Lament ninth, Solatium seventh, No Earthly eighth, Knight of Monaster ninth, Compound Fracture tenth, and Erain last. Time—3 mins. 30 2-5 secs.

COLOMBO BEATEN AGAIN.

FEATURES OF THE FIRST DAY'S RACING AT ASCOT; ROYAL HUNT CUP SUMMED UP.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

ASCOT, Tuesday Night.

THE going here is hard to describe accurately. To begin with, there is a growth of grass on the course that is wonderful when compared with pastures elsewhere, and many a farmer would give his eyes to be able to turn his beasts loose along the back stretches.

A great deal of water has been poured on the course, and in places the going is good. Out in the centre of the straight mile it is very hard. Along the rails on each side it is good to fairly good, but it is uneven in the sense that in half a mile a horse may have to run through three different kinds of going. I noticed this morning some of the more long-headed jockeys walking the course and picking out what they thought the best places to go.

Some queer things happened during the course of the afternoon, and the climax was reached in the last race—the St. James's Palace Stakes—where Colombo was beaten half a length by Flamenco. Jack Jarvis, who trains Flamenco for Lord Rosebery, is one of those who has never greatly believed in Colombo's having super-merits, and he did not run Flamenco—who had been second to Windsor Lad in the Newmarket Stakes—as a forlorn hope. Other people looked on him as such, and accordingly odds of five to one were betted on Colombo.

THE FAVOURITE'S RUNNING.

It must be said that they had not gone far when it was apparent that Colombo was not the Colombo we have known. Flamenco settled down about a length in front of him and gradually increased the advantage until he was some three lengths to the good making the turn into the straight. Flamenco then appeared to come away from the rails and run wide.

What happened was that Wragg had walked the course in the morning and noted the variations in the state of the going to which I have referred. Flamenco likes it hard, and pulled out so as to come in the middle of the course—a daring manœuvre it seemed to leave the rails, but it paid. Colombo then closed part of the gap between them, but Flamenco ran on strongly on the top of the ground, and was a clever winner by half a length.

Now, Flamenco is not thought to be anything out of the common, and only one who should be able to win a good-class handicap over a mile. So we must leave it that Colombo was not-Colombo this afternoon, and that his effort in the Derby had taken more out of him than had been thought.

WON BY OUTSIDERS.

The two long-distance races—the Ascot Stakes and the Gold Vase—were won by outsiders. The former by Mr. Frank Dennis's Hands Off, a son of Embargo, and the best that the winner of the Irish Derby and the City and Suburban has yet sired. He won by a length and four lengths from Penny-a-Liner and Meldrum, all three of them being outsiders, and all three in the lower half of the handicap. All three also had always been well up in the leading division.

Hands Off first made the running; then Meldrum took it up, and then it was the turn of Hands Off again. Those at the top of the handicap did not do well. Solatium was a most disappointing favourite, for he was last for some time along with Ciaran. The latter improved most, and finished fourth. Within the Law struck a patch of going where it was boggy, in the Swinley bottom, and was never going well again.

In what seemed a terrifically fast-run race for the Gold Vase, Sir Charles Hyde's Duplicate, by Son and Heir, made every yard of the running and beat the hot favourite, Bright Bird, by two lengths.

THE FIELD STRUNG OUT.

When they had gone half a mile Duplicate had them strung out a hundred yards at a conservative estimate, Bright Bird and Alcazar being the last pair. Bright Bird made up most of the ground, but never got to Duplicate.

Only the two-year-old races rendered any increment to the punters. There were only six runners for the Coventry Stakes, in which odds were laid on the Aga Khan's Hairan, a Fairway colt bred by Mr. J. J. Maher, who made 6,400 guineas at Doncaster. He ran a trifle green and Gordon Richards had to give him a touch of the whip; but he won comfortably from Pampas Grass and The Jesuit by a length and a half and three lengths.

There was a field more than four times as big for the Queen Mary Stakes, won by Lord Lonsdale's Caretta, who started favourite. Caretta, who is leased from the National Stud, is by Solario out of Daumont, a daughter of Tillywhim. She made all the running, but the Rose of England filly must have been pressing her closely before she stopped a furlong out. Red Biddy then came on, but Caretta beat her by two lengths, Cortina finishing third.

AN IRISH-BRED FILLY.

An Irish-bred filly, Spend-a-Penny, from the stud of Mr. Dan Sullivan, who bred the Derby winner, won the first race of the meeting, the Queen Anne Stakes, in a great finish, in which E. Smith took her to the front half a furlong from home, and then resisting a strong challenge from Windsor Lad's stable companion, Rambler, beat him by a short head. North Devon was only a neck away, third.

His Reverence ran only moderately, and clearly the delay which occurred in his passage from Ireland had done him harm. Spend-a-Penny is by Apron out of that well-known producer of winners, Lady Earn, by Fridge of Earn.

Frank Butters, who trains Spend-a-Penny, had his second winner of the afternoon when Achtenan, a most improved colt by Achtoi, bred by Captain R. B. Brassey, beat Windsor Lad's stable companion, Washington, and Rathmore in the Prince of Wales's Stakes.

SELECTIONS.

When I say that to-morrow's race for the Royal Hunt Cup appears very open I am saying something obviously right, because the Hunt Cup is always an open race, run at a cracking pace from start to finish, and is one in which any piece of bad luck can seldom be retrieved. There is not this year any English-trained horse of real class such as the French colt Asterus was when he won.

There is a French colt in the field to-morrow, M. Pierce Wertheimer's Rentenmark, and both his performances in France and his looks make him out to have a good deal of class on his side; more, indeed, than the majority of the handicappers engaged in this race can lay claim to.

Alluvial, the present favourite, was a ridiculously easy winner of the Victoria Cup, which is nearly a furlong shorter than the distance of this race; but if Alluvial can keep up a strong gallop through the last furlong then he should nearly win. Light Sussex is set with too much to do, but I have all along favoured the chance of the Jubilee winner, Cotoneaster, whom it will be hard to keep out of the first three.

His Majesty's colt, The Abbot, is greatly fancied, but I think he may be a little outclassed. Diamantée made a bold show last year, but was not quite good enough. I imagine that she will just about duplicate that performance this time.

There are some spots in the form of Young Native that give him an outside chance. Morfair has been one of the best-backed horses in the race during the last few days. The handicapper has taken a decided chance with him in dropping him to 7st. 12lb. on the assumption, apparently, that he does not get a mile. Hot Bun is understood to be not so well fancied as her stable companion, Solfatara, who ran well in the Jubilee.

Pricket has been pleasing greatly in his recent work, and remained in the race instead of Versicle, but he has had his chance before in this race, and could not take it. Fonab is another who had his chance last year, when he was favourite and ran badly. Commander III. is hard to sum up, because he was second to Rodosto in the French Two Thousand, and ran third in the Victoria Cup under difficulties. He is allowed 4lb. from Alluvial for a two-lengths beating, but Mr Joel's horse won very easily.

A QUARTET TO CHOOSE FROM.

The four I like are Alluvial, Rentenmark, Cotoneaster and Morfair. I choose RENTENMARK to win from Morfair and Cotoneaster.

FELICITATION has never done anything before or since equal to his second in the St. Leger to Hyperion, but even allowing for that, he should win the first race of the day, the Churchill Stakes.

One would be greatly daring to oppose the Derby winner, WINDSOR LAD, in the King Edward VII. Stakes, but after Colombo's defeat to-day anything might happen.

ROCK STAR, who has found some form again, may win the Bessborough Stakes.

Good two-year-old as Knighted may be, the three-year-old SATYR should beat him in the Fern Hill Stakes.

LIGHT BROCADE has to give 7lb. to Zelina in the Coronation Stakes, but she beat her so easily in the Oaks that she may again do so at the altered weights.

GALTEE MORE.

CRICKET.

THE ENGLISH TEAM.

FEW CHANGES FOR THE SECOND TEST AT LORD'S.

THE following thirteen players have been asked to be at Lords on Friday, ready to play for England in the second Test match against Australia. A final selection of the eleven will be made on the morning of the match:—

R. E. S. Wyatt (Warwickshire), captain;
C. F. Walters (Worcestershire),
K. Farnes (Essex),
Sutcliffe (Yorkshire),
Hammond (Gloucestershire),
Mendren (Middlesex),
Leyland (Yorkshire),
Ames (Kent),
Verity (Yorkshire),
Bowes (Yorkshire),
Geary (Leicestershire),
Nichols (Essex), and Barnett (Gloucestershire).

The change in the weather, and the fact that the selectors were informed that certain players were unfit, affected their deliberations. Sir Stanley Jackson announced the first ten names round about noon yesterday, and nearly three hours later came the news that Geary, Nichols and Barnett had also been invited. Considering the delay in picking the team, it may appear rather curious that the side differs little from that which was badly defeated at Nottingham.

The fourteen men were asked to go to Trent Bridge, and of these only the Nawab of Pataudi and Mitchell have failed to gain recognition. Thus Barnett, the Gloucestershire opening batsman, alone is a new choice. At Nottingham, Wyatt stood down with his injured thumb, Nichols acted as twelfth man, and Bowes was allowed to go and assist Yorkshire. Now two men have to be left out, and, no doubt, the exact constitution of the side will depend upon the weather.

The selectors are to be congratulated on not making panic stricken changes. In 1921, when England lost the first three Test matches, the team was chopped and changed in wholesale fashion, with the result that it stood little chance of settling down. The fact that Wyatt is now fit to take over the captaincy will add much-needed confidence, and as Hammond and Nichols have found their best form, the side, though differing little in personnel, seems stronger.

No spin bowler has been chosen to replace Mitchell, but there are three fast—Farnes, Bowes and Nicholls. The Australians have not played this type of bowling satisfactorily, and an attack banked solely on pace may easily win the match for England. Even if not required to open the innings with Sutcliffe, Barnett is the type of batsman to hit the Australians off their length. At Nottingham, England showed too little enterprise.

BRILLIANT BOB IN DERBY FINAL.

ROVING CUTLET VICTIM OF BUMPING.

There was a big surprise in the first semi-final of the Greyhound Derby at the White City, London, last night, when Roving Cutlet, on whom odds of 3 to 1 were laid, failed to qualify for the final. He was a victim of bumping at the first bend, but for which he would have been second, even if not the winner. Although he was nearly knocked over, he recovered well, and went in pursuit of the leaders, whom, however, he could not catch. Grey Race, who was very quickly in his stride, obtained a winning advantage along the back straight, and won with remarkable ease, returning the remarkably good time of 29.69 seconds. This is only .07 behind the world race for the Derby distance established by Future Cutler two years ago.

In the second semi-final the hot favourite, Daveland, showed his gameness in beating Wild Woolley and Kumm On Steve. Daveland went to the front shortly after the first bend, but from that point on was lustily pursued by Wild Woolley, and the pair raced close together well ahead of the others to the line. Results:—

First semi-final—Grey Race, 9 to 2, 1; Brilliant Bob, 10 to 1, 2; Denham Peter, 25 to 1, 3; Roving Cutler, 1 to 3, 4; Grim Revenge, 33 to 1, 5; March On, 33 to 1, 6. Ten lengths; six lengths. 29.69 secs.

Second semi-final—Daveland, 11 to 10, 1; Wild Woolley, 9 to 2, 2; Kumm On Steve, 6 to 1, 3; Beef Cutlet, 8 to 1, 4; Lutwyche, 7 to 2, 5; English Warrior, 33 to 1, 6. Half a length; a length and a half. 29.94 secs.

Draw for the final on Saturday — Trap No. 1, Brilliant Bob; 2, Denham Peter; 3, Grey Race; 4, Daveland; 5, Kumm On Steve; 6, Wild Woolley.

JUNE STAKE SEMI-FINALS.

LAWN TENNIS.

ULSTER'S VISIT TO DUBLIN.

TO-DAY'S CONTEST AT FITZWILLIAM.

FOR the first time for very many years we are to see a representative Ulster team in Dublin, as the Northern province is playing Leinster at Fitzwilliam Club at 3 o'clock to-day. Why the game in the North should be below the Leinster standard is hard to explain, yet the fact remains that it generally has been, and a good showing by the visitors this afternoon will be very popular with the Davis Cup and international Selectors. Leinster teams have travelled to Belfast every year since the War, at any rate, and have generally won comfortably, so it will be interesting to see how to-day's contest will turn out.

Although T. G. McVeagh has been forced to cry off owing to an injury the home side should prove hard to beat. It is not the strongest that could be put in the field, but the wisdom of including Egan and Brown is obvious. They only need practice of this kind to tighten up their play, and it would not be surprising to see both win their singles, as Egan has done well in the two Ulster tournaments in which he has competed this year. Ryan, Fannin and Sandys were obvious choices, and form a strong top half of the team, while Kennedy has come in place of McVeagh.

Only two of the Ulstermen are known in Dublin, so it is difficult to forecast a result, but Leinster should hold an advantage on the singles. H. C. Brown has played in the Irish championships for the last couple of years, and put up an extremely good show against E. A. McGuire last year. He is an excellent volleyer, but not quite so good off the ground. He should certainly extend anyone he is called upon to meet. Hill is a steady base-liner, while, of the others, chief interest will be centred on P. P. Jackson, who by winning the Ulster title last Saturday became the first Ulsterman to hold the title since 1927. He played splendidly to beat the Scottish international, J. B. Fulton, in the final. The following are the teams (in alphabetical order):—

Leinster—R. G. Brown, R. F. Egan, E. A. Fannin, G. W. Kennedy, H. J. Ryan, R. J. Sandys.

Ulster—H. C. Brown, T. Campbell, E. D. Hill, P. P. Jackson, J. O'Keeffe, A. Wilson.

TRINITY RETAIN THE McCABE CUP.

Dublin University retained the McCabe Cup, defeating University College by 5 matches to 2, at Terenure yesterday. Owing to a late start one single and one double were not played. With exactly the same team out as last year, Trinity were strong favourites, but they had to fight very hard to win as four of the five singles, and both doubles, went to three sets, all the University College players showing excellent form. Coster and O'Herlihy gained a remarkable win in the top doubles, after Sandys and Hannin had won the first set and led 5-4 and 40-15 in the second. Results:—

SINGLES.

R. J. Sandys (D.U.) beat E. F. Coster—3-6, 6-3, 6-3.
T. B. Hannin (D.U.) lost to J. F. Houlihan—6-3, 3-6, 3-6.
H. J. Walker (D.U.) beat D. A. Houlihan—3-6, 7-5, 6-0.
H. F. Sloan (D.U.) beat J. Sheehan—11-9, 3-6, 6-2.
M. G. Hewson (D.U.) beat A. P. Barry (jun.)—6-0, 6-4.

DOUBLES.

Sandys and Hannin lost to Coster and D. O'Herlihy—7-5, 5-7, 3-6.
Walker and H. J. Ryan beat J. F. and D. A. Houlihan—6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

ULSTER PROFESSIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP.

Twenty Ulster professional golfers took part in the qualifying round of the Ulster Professional Championship at Portwilliam, Belfast, yesterday. Thirty-six holes were played, and the eight best scores qualified for match play over 18 holes. The semi-finals will be played this afternoon, and the final takes place to-morrow.

The holder of the championship is Joe McCartney, who has held the title in four of the last five years. C. W. Pope, the home professional, had the best score in the morning with a 70, and he was one stroke better in the afternoon, when S. Fairweather (Malone), the champion in 1932, also returned 69. Joe McCartney had 74 in the morning and 72 in the afternoon. Showers fell in the early part of the day. The qualifiers were:—

C. W. Pope (Portwilliam)	70	69	139
S. Fairweather (Malone)	73	69	142
J. McCartney (unattached)	74	72	146
J. McKenna (Armagh)	72	75	147
P. Stevenson (Royal Portrush)	74	74	148
J. Adams (Royal Co. Down)	74	74	148
G. Murdoch (Royal Belfast)	75	74	149
E. Patterson (Donaghadee)	77	73	150

Draw for match play:—Pope v. Stevenson; McCartney v. Fairweather; McKenna v. Patterson; Adams v. Murdock.

BRITISH WOMAN TITLE-HOLDER DEFEATED.

Mrs. Andrew Holm (Troon), the holder of the British title and twice winner of the Scottish, was beaten in the second round of the Scottish Women's Championship at North Berwick yesterday. She had received a bye through the first stage, and in the next she lost to Mrs. J. B. Watson (Murrayfield), four times Scottish champion, by 3 and 1.

DATES AND VENUES FOR BIG EVENTS.

The Championship Committee of the Royal and Ancient Club yesterday announced that the Amateur Championship of 1935 will be played at Royal Lytham and St. Annes in the week beginning May 20.

The Open Championship will be on the course of the Honourable Company of Edinburgh Golfers at Muirfield, East Lothian, in the week beginning June 24.

YACHTING.

RAINBOW ON TRIAL.

NEWPORT (R.I.), Tuesday.

The newly-built Rainbow, which is regarded as almost certain to defend the America's Cup against the British challenger, Mr. T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour, won her third race in the official trials here to-day, with Mr. Harold S. Vanderbilt at the helm. She defeated Vanitie by the narrow margin of 2 mins. 8 secs.

In another trial race the remodelled Yankee, which is known as the heavy weather craft, beat Weetamoe by 9 mins. 6 secs. As there was only a breeze of less than seven knots this performance was regarded by yachtsmen as very impressive.

BOBOLINK WINS EASILY.

Bobolink has been coming back steadily into form, and last evening she won the D.B.S.C. match for 17 Footers (which had fallen through on Thursday last) in decisive fashion. The wind was fresh from West when they were sent away at 6.35, Pauline and Silver Moon suffering a recall. From the harbour mouth they had a dead beat to Seapoint mark, and it scattered the fleet. When they returned Bobolink had a huge lead. Finish:—

	H'cap.	H. M. S.
Bobolink (winner)—Mr. A. McMullen	4 m.	7 41 42
Hera (2nd prize)—Mr. A. F. Nesbitt	3 m.	7 46 3

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

ELECTION OF CLUBS TO F.S. LEAGUE DEFERRED.

At a meeting of the Management Committee of the Free State League last night it was decided to defer the election of clubs to the league until 28th inst.

The Committee appointed a commission, in Mr. J. J. Dunne (patron), J. Wickham (Bohemians) and T. Scully (Shamrock Rovers), to visit Sligo this week-end to interview officials of Sligo Rovers, who have made application for membership.

ATHLETICS.

DEATH OF A. B. GEORGE.

Mr. Alfred Barnett George, winner of twelve athletic championships in America, Canada and England, died yesterday at Bournemouth at the age of 66. Mr. George, who was born on January 9, 1868, had a long and varied athletic career, winning races in three continents, competing with—and frequently defeating—many famous athletes. He was a brother of W. G. George, holder of the world's professional record for one mile.

Three Winners for Frank Butters.

Frank Butters had a great send-off for Ascot on the opening day. He won the Queen Anne Stakes for Sir Alfred Butt with Spend-a-Penny, the Coventry Stakes for the Aga Khan with Hairan, and the Prince of Wales's Stakes for Mr. T. Lant with Achtenan.

GOLF.

LAST EIGHT AT ROSSLARE

FURTHER SURPRISES IN IRISH CLOSE CHAMPIONSHIP.

BY OUR GOLF CORRESPONDENT.

ROSSLARE Tuesday Evening.

THE field for the Irish Close Amateur Championship has been reduced to eight. Three of Ireland's team of last year have survived the ordeal, and another, who represented us in several internationals—Roy McConnell—has staged a splendid comeback. Brown is alone among the internationalists in the top half, and in the bottom are Roy McConnell, John Burke and Redmond Simcox. It looks certain that Brown will get to the final, but there is a problem awaiting us in the morning, when Burke goes out with McConnell in what should be the match of the week.

Right to the end of the day we had surprises, as in the third round T. A. Healy got through from Charles Carroll, who in the morning was within an ace of being beaten by James Gibney. H. C. Silcock, who has been playing all his golf in the London area since he finished at Trinity, is one of the eight, and in the morning plays Brown in what will be the most important match of his career, but the key-match of the championship will be between McConnell and Burke.

McCONNELL'S FINE PLAY.

The holder is playing his best golf, but I doubt if McConnell, even at the height of his form, was any better than he has been during these two days. He was seen at his best in the match this evening against William O'Sullivan. Many thought that the latter would give the Royal Portrush man a run for it, as in the morning he had brilliant figures against C. J. McMullan, but he failed to hold McConnell, who, out in 34 with a 5 at the ninth, turned with a lead of three, and, maintaining his consistency, became dormy four. O'Sullivan played a poor shot to the fourteenth, and was trapped and out of bounds at the sixteenth from the tee. He lost that hole and the match by 3 and 2. He, however, did uncommonly well to get so far in this, his second championship, and, despite his defeat, can still be regarded as one of our coming young golfers.

BURKE AT HIS BEST.

Burke was in irresistible form against Cecil West. Out in 34, he was 5 up, and he won by 7 and 6—a margin that would not, however, have been so pronounced had West been on terms with his putter. Against James Byrne, Brown won the first four holes; was out in level fours for a lead of 4, and won by 4 and 2.

In the morning Gibney almost brought off another surprise. He was 2 up on Carroll with five to play, and when Carroll proceeded to take four putts on the thirteenth green I thought the Dundalk man showed signs of cracking, but he had a splendid 2 at the short fourteenth, and from that on one forgot about those four putts. He had a good 4 at the fifteenth, a grand 3 at the sixteenth, and another magnificent 3 at the seventeenth for the match, but another half-roll of the ball would have sent it in for a 3 for Gibney, who for the last eight holes was one under fours, which, however, was not good enough. It was one of the best finishes I have seen in this or any other of our championships for a considerable time.

GOOD FIGHT BY SCOTT.

John Burke came up against E. Scott, a member of the Royal Portrush Club, who in a championship match with Jack McLean at Newcastle, brought the Scot to the seventeenth green. It was a capital struggle, and Burke had to produce his best golf to win at the sixteenth after turning 3 up. Scott played a lot of excellent golf, but he had not quite the same finish as the holder, and also lacked the length of the Lahinch man from the tees.

Two internationalists in Brown and James Carr met in this round, and the match went to the seventeenth, where Brown won. The golf here was very fine indeed, and when they finished the winner was two under fours. With four holes played Brown was one up, and he was still that one to the good at the turn, but a 2 at the tenth was very useful for the Waterford man, who had won the ninth by laying a stymie. Brown, however, lost the eleventh to a 4. Following two halves in fours Brown took the fourteenth in three, the others being halved in fours.

T. E. Murphy, of Knock, whose golf has been much talked of since he came here, got through the round by a good win over Charles Donovan by 4 and 3. Results:—

HORTICULTURAL EDUCATION.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—

It is rather regrettable that, notwithstanding the many advantages certain to accrue from an extension of horticultural knowledge in Ireland, no practical steps appear to be taken towards its inclusion in the curriculum of vocational education, or as a subject for practical instruction in rural national schools. Agriculture and horticulture, as understood by the County Councils, is, no doubt, a very desirable and important development in rural conditions so far as the application of either branch goes, which, it must be remembered, is to a restricted section of the community. As a subject to be brought home to the masses of young people through the medium of the national school, during the most susceptible portion of their lives, it is, however, an entirely different proposition. If we want to improve the condition of the masses of the now increasing rural population of this country, and by this term we mean the poor cottiers, agricultural labourers and small farmers, we must begin by imbuing them with a brighter outlook on life, and this, we submit, can only be accomplished by teaching the children of these people to make the most of their little gardens, and thus make their homes and surroundings more comfortable. How few there are, for instance, who really know the capabilities of our country in the matter of fruit production. Our climate, soil and natural position are all that could be desired. All we require is the practical training in elementary horticulture necessary for the realisation of the wonderful possibilities of rural Ireland.
